Convention Security

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Federal troops will back up local police in maintaining order at the national political conventions this summer, but will stay out of sight unless trouble develops, officials said Wednesday.

The joint statement by Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst and Florida Gov. Reubin Askew said the move was based on indications "that additional resources may be necessary to insure the maintenance of peace, order and public safety."

However, a spokesman for Askew said the deployment of troops was "just precautionary" and the military personnel wouldn't even be seen unless things got out of control.

"There won't be any soldiers walking the streets of Miami Beach," said Don Pride, Askew's press secretary.

Pride said the move did not signify an escalation of security preparations for the political conventions. "The governor had been thinking of asking for back up military support since we found out we were getting both conventions."

The statement followed a private meeting between Askew and Kleindienst in Washington, D. C., Tuesday. It was decided there, said Pride, to back up local police and National Guardsmen with Regular Army troops at the convention.

The Defense Department did not specify how many troops would be sent to the Miami area. State and local officials already had put together a security force of some 4,000 men, including 3,000 members of the Guard.

Commenting on the Keindienst-Askew statement, a leader of the Youth International party—Yippies—compared the move to U.S. policy in Vietnam.

Jeff Nighbyrd, chief negotiator for the Yippies, said "close to $1 million has been spent on military and police needs for this convention, and nothing for the human needs of nondelegates. It was a disastrous policy in Vietnam and it's a disastrous policy in Miami Beach."

Estimates of the number of demonstrators expected to attend the July 10-14 Democratic convention and the Aug. 21-23 Republican convention have ranged from 5,000 to 100,000.

The Defense Department said federal troops will be stationed on federal property. Military authorities were surveying nearby Homestead Air Force Base as a possible site.

During the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago, several thousand Army troops were flown in but never put into action, although police and antiwar demonstrators clashed in the streets and parks.

Mayors—Viet War

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — A conference of the nation's mayors overwhelmingly reversed its stand Wednesday and endorsed President Nixon's policy on Vietnam after a passionate appeal by Democratic Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago.

Some 350 mayors and city representatives at the U.S. Conference of Mayors annual meeting also voted without debate, 72-58, to duck the issue of school busing to achieve racial integration.

And, for the first time in its history, the conference adopted a stand on gun control legislation, urging Congress to pass tough laws to dry up the hand gun market.

The mayors cheered, stomped their feet and shouted as Daley climaxed the Vietnam debate by saying, "In the name of God, let us stand behind the President and hope and pray he can end it tomorrow."

Red-faced and shouting at the top of his voice, Daley had said, "No one will do more to work against a Republican candidate for president than I will, but I don't think when a man is president—we have him, as we've seen in this country, in the despicable condition of taking him in the back door of hotels, afraid to come out in the public because of what was going on because of this situation in Vietnam."

It was a rare and dramatic appearance by Daley on the floor of the conference. He was not present last year when the mayors voted for the first time in their history to call for U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam by a specific date—Dec. 31, 1971.

A group of liberal big city mayors tried to update that resolution by changing the date to Oct. 1, 1972, and adding a provision that withdrawals be conditioned on release of U.S. prisoners of war by that date.

Instead, the mayors adopted by a vote so large that the chair did not count it a resolution that "All United States air, land and sea forces shall be withdrawn from South Vietnam by a date certain and not later than four months after the conclusion of an internationally supervised cease-fire throughout Indochina, the release of all prisoners and an accounting for all those missing in action."

Indochina War

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. jets attacked two more North Vietnamese navy bases near Vinh in an effort to prevent the unloading of war supplies from Chinese ships anchored off the port, U.S. military spokesmen announced Wednesday.

Spokesmen for the 7th Fleet said Navy pilots in the raids Tuesday destroyed a pier at the Vinh boatyard four miles north-east of the port and damaged a pier at the Hai Yen naval base two miles away.

Navy fighter-bombers also attacked two storage areas about 30 miles northwest of the main port of Haiphong and pilots reported two secondary explosions.

The raids at Vinh, 145 miles north of the demilitarized zone and 170 miles south of Haiphong, were aimed at stopping transshipment of enemy war supplies from the Chinese vessels, blocked from entering the port by U.S. mines.

American military sources say North Vietnam has been trying with only limited success to circumvent the U.S. mines by unloading supplies on islands off Vinh and Haiphong and bringing them inland aboard barges.

The enemy campaign began about 10 days ago.

American pilots flew more than 220 strikes over the North Tuesday and damaged or destroyed 11 bridges, 13 warehouses, 30 trucks and eight supply boats, the U.S. Command announced.

Office Buildings Terrorized Six Die In Gun Spree

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — A security guard armed with two sawed-off rifles went on a shooting spree in an office building Wednesday, killing bystanders as they scrambled for cover.

Six persons were killed and seven others, including the alleged gunman, were wounded. One man was injured severely when he leaped through a window to escape the fusillade.

Police Chief Frank Jones said the alleged gunman, Edwin C. Grace, 33, of Brooklyn, N.Y., shot himself in the neck and head and was brought from the building along with other wounded persons before authorities realized who he was.

Cherry Hill Mayor John Holden said Grace was a Pinkerton guard on assignment for the defective agency in nearby Williamstown.

Holden said Grace had been living in the Cherry Hill area for about a year. He said police knew of no motive for the shootings.

Pinkerton Vice President William Linn said Grace was assigned to the Trenton office. Grace was listed in critical condition at Cherry Hill Hospital. Doctors said: "There is a good chance he'll pull through." Three of the victims also were critical.

The gunfire erupted shortly after 3 p.m. in Heritage House, an office building on North Kings Highway.

Police said the gunman, armed with .22-caliber rifles, terrorized the building for several minutes, but apparently made no attempt to shoot any women. All the victims were males.

Several young women in the GMA Co. office escaped as the gunman ran along a first-floor corridor. One man was (Turn To Page 30) (See "Gun Spree")

New Question In Break-In

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Two of the five men arrested in connection with the break-in into the Democratic National Committee office in Washington, D.C., are registered Democrats, the Miami News reported Wednesday.

The News said Frank Fiorini registered as a Democrat under the name of Frank Anthony Sturgis in February, 1962 and Eugenio Martinez registered in March, 1971.

Richard Murphy of the Democratic National Committee told the News the disclosure was "very interesting" and said he would begin checking to see if either of the two men had volunteered to work on preparations for the party's convention at Miami Beach next month.

Asked if the two men could have been plants, Murphy said he didn't know.

"I am completely amazed at this whole thing," he said. "The circle seems to be constantly widening."

Murphy, who is in Florida to head convention arrangements for the Democrats, said he had no knowledge of a connection between Fiorini, Martinez and the party.

The five men were arrested Saturday and charged with breaking into the Democratic headquarters.

The other three men were identified as James W. McCord Jr., security chief for the Committee to Reelect the President; Bernard L. Barker, and V. F. Gonzalez.

Barker and Gonzalez are shown on voter registration records in Miami as Republicans, the Miami News said.

Move Toward Vote On Revenue Sharing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Wednesday pushed toward passage a $5.3-billion-a-year program of aid to states and cities, knocking aside a major roadblock.

It voted 223 to 185 against permitting amendments. If the move to open up the bill had succeeded, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., said, he would have withdrawn the measure at least temporarily.

Mills, handling the measure as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, predicted passage Thursday. The Senate has yet to act.

The bill, for which governors, mayors and other local officials across the country have been lobbying tirelessly, is a substitute for President Nixon's revenue-sharing program.

But his administration has accepted it and it has the support of leaders of both parties in the House.

The opposition also crossed party lines. It includes members who object to the principle, others who say the distribution formula is unfair and still others who object to a single measure appropriating nearly $30 billion over five years, without the usual annual review of funding by the Appropriations Committee.

On the key procedural test, 110 Democrats and 113 Republicans voted to bar amendments, 128 Democrats and 57 Republicans against.

The bill, in its first year, would allocate $1.8 billion to the states and $3.5 billion to cities and other local governments.

Fulbright And Laird Continue Arms Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. J. W. Fulbright asserted Wednesday that approval of President Nixon's requested offensive weapons in the wake of the U.S.-Soviet arms-limitation agreement would "only trigger another arms spiral."

The chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said also congressional support of the new Trident submarine, B1 bomber and other systems would tip what he called U.S.-Soviet arms parity "and very likely destroy the agreements themselves."

The Arkansas Democrat made his allegations when he and Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird had a sometimes heated exchange at the end of a morning meeting of the committee.

"If we give it to you," Fulbright said, "you'll only trigger another arms spiral. They'll (Soviets) spend all their money on weapons that they need for something else."

"Well, that's your opinion, senator," Laird replied.

The secretary told the committee he hopes the submarine and bomber for which the administration is asking $1.3 billion this year can be scrapped in negotiations but said until then their loss would jeopardize the nation's security and remove the Soviet's incentive for negotiating further arms accords.

Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said a halt in improvement of U.S. weapons now would slip the country first into a state of obsolescence and then into an inferiority that could invite enemy attack.

McGovern Moves Closer To Goal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Sen. George McGovern marched to the threshold of the Democratic presidential nomination Wednesday with a near-sweep in New York's climactic presidential primary.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy declared flatly and "as finally as I can" that under no circumstances would he accept a spot on the national ticket in 1972.

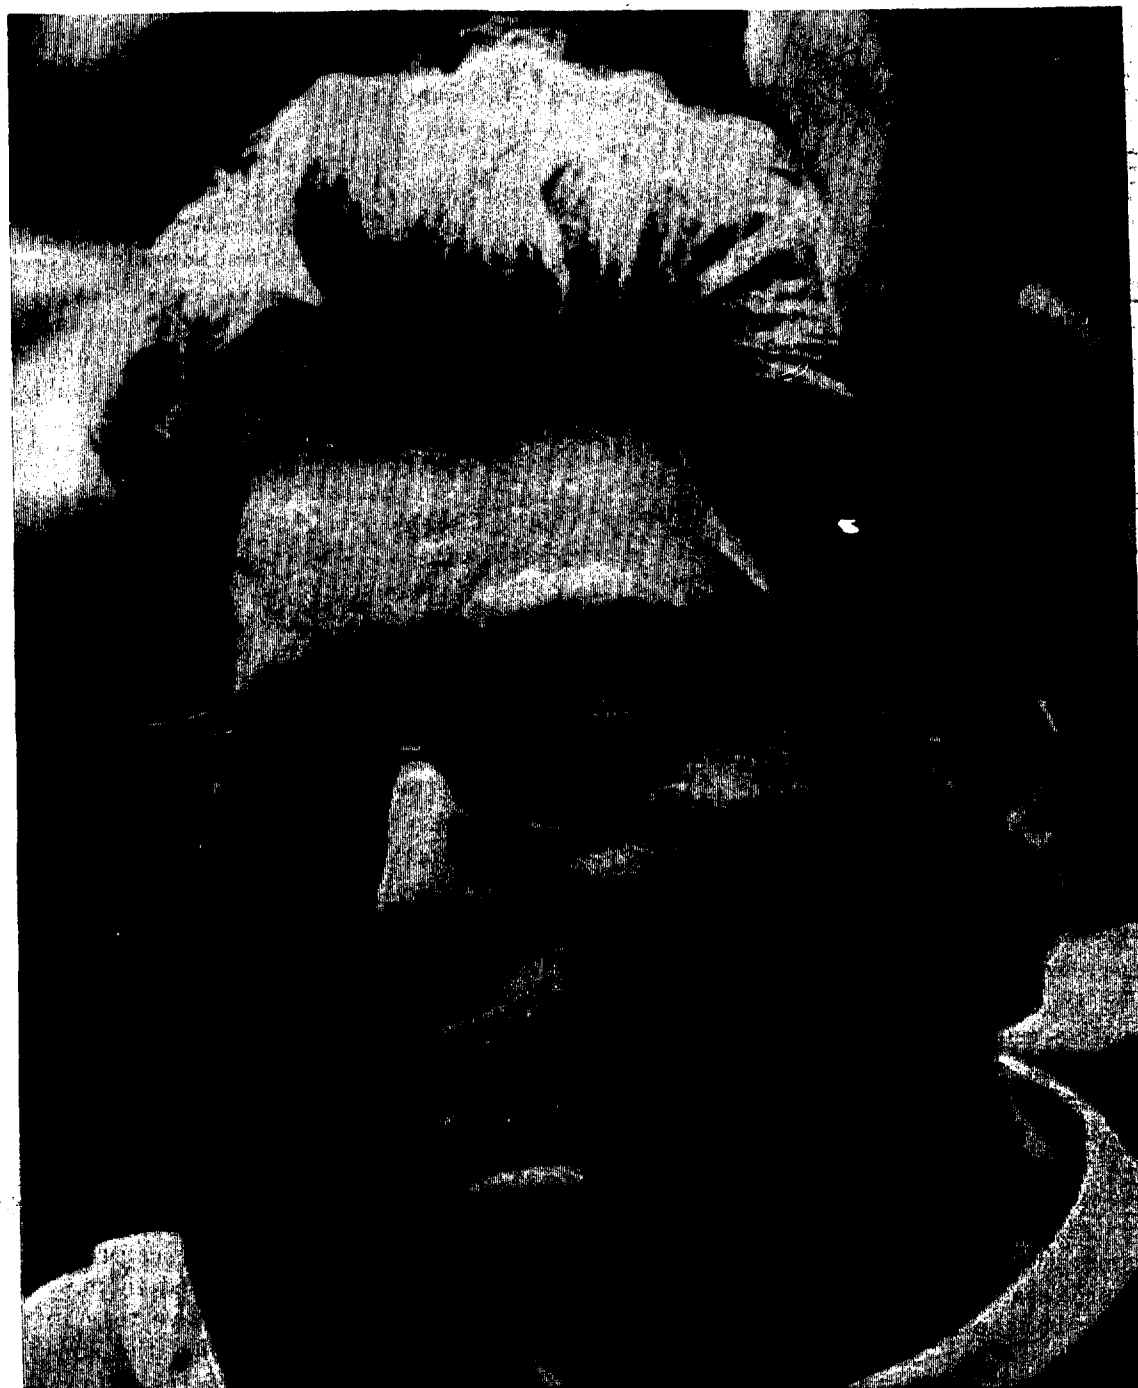

And Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, sharply critical of McGovern positions he has said could spell electoral disaster, rated the South Dakota senator a 3-1 favorite for nomination, but maintained that he doesn't have it wrapped up.

The outcome that took shape Wednesday after long, lagging count of the complex and confusing ballot in the Tuesday New York primary showed McGovern had captured 225 delegates of 248 at stake.

That meant his supporters had won all but 12 of the delegate races they contested, and it also meant McGovern will gain another bloc of New York delegates Saturday, to push his state total to at least 250.

Recommend Wider Controls Over Agricultural Products

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Price Commission, deciding Wednesday that "firm and immediate action" is necessary to halt the sharp rise in food prices, recommended that the Cost of Living Council impose wider controls over agricultural products.

The commission made the decision during a day-long meeting, but a spokesman stopped short of telling newsmen the precise recommendation.

"They feel the problem exists because of the lack of control of raw agricultural products," the spokesman said.

The Cost of Living Council meets Thursday morning to consider the commission's recommendations.

The council has authority to extend controls to raw agricultural products, which by government definition includes both live animals and vegetables.

Asked if the commission is anticipating a decision by the council on food prices, the spokesman said, "I think the commission is definitely hoping for some."

But the commission spokesman said the seven-member agency "is not currently recommending a freeze" on food prices.

That was among options discussed at the session, along with removal of the exemption on raw agricultural products, limiting price increases to a dollar-for-dollar past rule of cost, and government persuasion to hold down food prices.

Since President Nixon imposed a wage-price freeze last Aug. 15, raw agricultural products have been exempt from controls.

Israelis Capture Syrian General, Four Colonels

by THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli ground and air forces attacked Lebanon in two places Wednesday inflicting casualties and capturing a Syrian general and four colonels driving along a Lebanese border road.

War planes and artillery pounded the farming town of Hasbaya on the western slopes of Mt. Hermon for four hours. Announcements in Beirut by the government and Palestinian guerrillas said 48 persons were killed.

The Syrian officers were captured 24 miles to the southwest, 60 yards inside Lebanese territory, the Israeli military command said.

The Lebanese government reported 14 civilians were killed and 25 wounded in Hasbaya. Palestinian guerrillas, whose bases around the town also were attacked, said 30 of their men were killed and 30 wounded.

Israel gave no estimate of Arab casualties.

One witness in Lebanon described the attack on Hasbaya as causing more damage and casualties than any previous Israeli raid. A guerrilla base on the outskirts of the town took a direct hit and was destroyed, witnesses said.

The Beirut announcement said a Lebanese military delegation accompanied by a group of visiting Syrian officers was ambushed by an Israeli armored force in the central sector of the border. Nine men were captured, it said, including the five Syrian officers and four Lebanese, one of them a captain. There was no explanation for the 10th prisoner reported by the Israelis.

Wednesday's action was the first Israeli strike inside Lebanon since a major four-day assault in February and an air attack in March. All troops had withdrawn by nightfall, he said.

The Israeli officer claimed the presence of Syrian and Lebanese officers together "indicated they were doing some joint planning, although I don't know what they planned."

Syria supports the Palestinian guerrillas but usually does not allow them to operate from her territory. The Lebanese are opposed to border operations by the guerrillas and have recently been reported attempting to tighten security.

Israel went into action, the Israeli officer said, because of information that the guerrillas planned to perform "spectacular new missions like the Lod airport massacre." This was a reference to an attack by three Japanese terrorists at Tel Aviv airport on May 30 in which 2 persons were killed. The terrorists were working for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, which also claimed credit for the two border incidents Tuesday.

Sources in Tel Aviv said the military trial of Kozo Okamoto, the surviving attacker in the airport incident, is to begin in about two weeks.

His state-appointed attorney, Max Kritzman, said it was "sensible Okamoto would plead insanity. Three of the charges against him carry a death penalty."

A Book 'X-Rays' Canada Runaways

Most of the talk about amnesty for draft dodgers and military deserters is coming from people in the United States. Very little is coming from the exiles themselves.

This is one of the salient facts to be learned from "War Resisters Canada," the first, and possibly only, fair and in-depth inquiry into the experiences, attitudes, present lives and future hopes of the thousands of young Americans who fled to Canada to escape the draft or service in Vietnam.

The book, published by the Knox, Pennsylvania, Free Press, is based on extensive interviews in nine Canadian cities in 1970-71 by Kenneth Fred Emerick, assistant professor-librarian at Clarion (Pa.) State College.

Emerick focuses on 33 war resisters as a representative sample of a total exile population estimated at between 60,000 and 100,000 in Canada alone. Of the 33, 21 were deserters from the armed forces (he calls them military resisters) and 12 were draft dodgers (draft resisters). Only one of the 33 expressed a desire to return to the United States to live.

To say that the study is fair is not to say that it is objective. Emerick does not disguise his pro-resister bias. He also shares the resisters' conviction that America is developing into a fascist police state.

Sample: "It is becoming almost as necessary to display the flag 'in the land of the free' as it was to exhibit the swastika in Germany."

This is another thing made clear by the book. Opposition to the Vietnam war was only one factor in the decision by these young men to abandon their native country. With varying degrees of intensity and logic, they are disgusted with the American way of life and of government, with pollution as much as with racism. They believe America is on the way down, and out.

Hence their emphatic rejection of amnesty—which becomes a more and more academic question, anyway, as they become more established in their new lives.

Another, and perhaps the most important, fact is that these men are not bums or freaks or misfits or cowards. Some are decorated Vietnam veterans who had only weeks or months to go before honorable discharge.

Emerick reserves his highest admiration, however, for the draft resisters who, he believes, exhibited a higher moral sensitivity and courage in their refusal to go along with America's "Vietnam insanity" from the beginning.

Still, the reader can find inadvertent compliments to the United States behind the anti-American harangues.

For instance, none of the resisters had any difficulty leaving the country. And in a section on the War Measures Act of 1970, when Prime Minister Trudeau suspended the civil liberties of Canadians in response to terrorist activities by Quebec separatists, even Emerick admits that such a thing could not happen in the United States.

This is not the first time that Americans have migrated en masse to Canada. As Emerick notes, thousands of colonists—the United Empire Loyalists—fled during the Revolutionary War and their Canadian descendants are justly proud of them.

But one thing the modern exiles seem unable to understand is that the United States is not Canada. For many reasons, none of which has anything to do with the character of Canadians, the democracies do not look to Canada for leadership.

Canada did not have to choose to intervene or not intervene in Southeast Asia against a threat, or supposed threat, to world freedom. Spared such a choice, Canada was also spared its consequences.

Perhaps in time the war resisters will lose some of their bitterness toward their former country. And perhaps, through the help of a book like "War Resisters Canada," Americans can come to understand what motivated them.

But first, both sides have to stop the deprecatory name-calling, the simplistic generalizations—and the hate.

Newly elected Marxist president, Salvador Allende Gossens of Chile, is finding it easier to set up a Socialist state in principle than it is in fact.

Allende, who took office in November, 1970, has just reorganized his cabinet in an attempt to solve a crisis traceable, first of all, to inflation now leaping ahead at a rate of 40 per cent per year and, second, to a serious split within his own coalition government.

The split is between Allende's own Socialist Party and the Communists who are the main support of his government. Of the two, the Moscow-oriented Communists are considered the more conservative. The split is over how to handle the ultra-left Revolutionary Left Movement, which is a splinter of Allende's own Socialists.

McGovern Success Credited To Skill

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
WASHINGTON (NEA)—On the strictly technical level, Sen. George McGovern's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination bears more resemblance to the late John F. Kennedy's 1960 effort than to the 1968 "children's crusade" of former Sen. Eugene McCarthy.

To describe McGovern's surprising successes simply as a grass roots undertaking is not sufficiently revealing.

McGovern and his managers surely have put together superb field organizations in state after state in every region of the country. They have also employed to great advantage a roving force of capable young people who have jumped from primary to primary.

This heavy infusion of the young makes the campaign look a lot like McCarthy's not least because McGovern's youthful activists have in place after place marshalled large numbers of their kind to swamp out the regulars in caucuses and district conventions.

But McCarthy's campaign never had the skillful direction this one has. The organizers who are with McGovern, who also were with McCarthy, have learned much about the tough side of politics. From the top management down, the staff keeps its eye on the main game—getting delegates to the national convention.

Young Gary Hart of Denver is an extremely able, clear-headed manager. Old pro Frank Mankiewicz, former aide to the late Robert F. Kennedy, needs no lessons.

It can't be overlooked, however, that McGovern himself imparts a driving spirit to these and others. He is a very shrewd, competent and ambitious politician. McCarthy had neither the competence nor the real drive.

It is at these points that resemblance is strong to the Kennedy campaign of 1960. Kennedy himself was the practical politician almost without equal. In key strategy sessions, he was always the sharpest and best informed man in the room.

He also employed roving cadres of field helpers, though they were a more limited band of dedicated friends who had exhibited political skills and knew how to use them to win Kennedy delegates in the more controlled, less open delegate selection process than prevailing.

When a new political organization is forming, when outsiders come into state after state, resentment and resistance are probably inevitable. Kennedy often was accused of "strong-arm" tactics, and Harry Truman refused to go to the Los Angeles convention because he said the young senator had "rigged" the result for himself.

McGovern is playing the same game, with much larger numbers of helpers because they are needed for the more open processes of today. His forces, too, are resented and resisted by many regulars, who charge that the newcomers have nothing on their minds but the hominid election of George McGovern.

There is some basis for the regulars' concern in 1972, as there was in 1960 with Kennedy. If McGovern wins at Miami Beach, and especially if he should capture the presidency, many new faces will turn up in the Democratic party lineup across the land.

It is evidently true, moreover, that some of McGovern's purist helpers, those nearest in type to the McCarthyites of 1968, show a "rule or ruin" spirit which would smother the less pure.

But this is not all-pervading, any more than it was in Kennedy's day. McGovern has some brilliant organizers who are also admirable accommodators, telling the regulars "we can all live together." The best example: Mrs. Jean Westwood, the Utah national committeewoman, one of the best politicians of this age.

MIR has been a major force in the illegal seizure of farms and other private property. Allende has criticized its actions but has taken no steps against it, presumably for political reasons.

A number of persons have been killed or wounded in clashes in which the MIR has been involved.

The Communists have been demanding action against the MIR, and apparently came out on top in Allende's latest cabinet reorganization.

A prominent figure dropped in the shake-up was the minister of economy, Pedro Vuskovic, a Marxist and former United Nations official who has been Allende's chief economic adviser.

Vuskovic has been prominently identified both with the accelerated rate of inflation and with the swift pace of government takeovers of private enterprise.

Increases Wiped Out
The inflation has wiped out the large wages increases which coupled with price controls, gave the country a temporary feeling of prosperity just after Allende took office.

That feeling has been replaced by mounting labor unrest brought on by printing press money and large deficits in the state-owned enterprises.

Copper production is less than normal and last month 8,000 miners at the huge open pit Chuquibambilla Mine went on strike demanding more voice in the running of the enterprise. The Chuquibambilla mine formerly was owned by Anaconda. It was nationalized a year ago.

Other setbacks suffered by the government include the loss of three seats by elections, a surprising show of strength by the opposition Christian Democrats in a recent labor election and the victory of an opposition candidate for the job of rector of the University of Chile.

Appeals to Labor
As Allende's difficulties have mounted he has coupled an appeal to labor for more work and sacrifice with a charge that the United States is imposing an "economic blockade" on Chile.

This despite the fact that in April the United States joined other foreign creditors in arranging new financing for at least part of Chile's foreign debt estimated to exceed $3 billion.

Allende accused the United States of blocking long term development credits to Chile.

Allende has promised to carry Chile along the road to socialism by legal means. But he does not have a majority in congress and he is under strong pressure from the ultra left for faster action by whatever means may be necessary. It is doubtful if his cabinet reorganization means the end of his troubles.

He is a graduate of Eden Theological Seminary of the United Church of Christ with a master's degree in divinity. Previous to his appointment as assistant, he served as pastor of the United Methodist church of Roodhouse. He has held pastorates since 1958 in both central and southern Illinois conferences.

African Gorge

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A prehistoric footprint and a series of shallow pits found in an East African gorge may give modern man new information about the anatomy and works of his ancient ancestors, the National Geographic Society reported Wednesday.

The footprint, at least half a million years old, "may be the oldest 'Stone Age' footprint known," the society said. It said "few others have ever been found."

Dr. Mary D. Leakey discovered a complex of artificial pits and channels in now hardened sand deposits of Olduvai Gorge in Tanzania. They may have been made by the first maker of tools.

The pits found by Mrs. Leakey, about a dozen of them, had been scooped by hand in sand which is now rock hard. In some cases, she told the National Geographic, clear traces of finger marks remain on the sides.

"Impressed into one of the pits is the greater part of a human footprint, most likely the left foot of a child," the society said.

The society said Prof. P. V. Tobias of Johannesburg, South Africa, "one of the leading authorities on the anatomy of prehistoric man," examined the footprint and finger marks.

Defendant Gets Jail, Probation

Judge Gordon Seator accepted a plea of guilty Wednesday morning from Eugene M. Derry, 25, of Nokomis on a charge of deceptive practice.

Derry entered the negotiated plea of guilty on the basis of writing a worthless check of $73.45.

He was ordered to spend five days in the county jail, admitted to probation for a period of two years, ordered to make restitution of all bad checks written in Morgan county and that he would seek psychiatric help from the Department of Mental Health. Derry was also ordered to pay court costs.

find one of the most precise indications of the age of the great Olduvai gorge. The pits were found by Mrs. Leakey in upper Olduvai levels inhabited more recently than various strata is determined.

Tribal King Hopes Some Old Ways Gone

By C.C. MINICLER
KODOK, Southern Sudan (AP) — One way to earn the wrath of the Reth is to steal his wives.

In the last eight years he estimates 50 of them have been stolen.

But the Reth, or divine king of the Shilluk tribe, is more worried about being ritually murdered—a traditional end for any who show weakness in his job.

The present Reth, in his 50s, was angry at the gradual disappearance of his wives, which he blames on the Anyanya rebels, but consoles himself with his remaining 100 wives and his 89 children.

Signs of weakness in western society may mean unwanted early retirement.

Signs of old age or ill health traditionally means death for the Reth.

The Shilluk tribe, bordering the White Nile from Lake No northward to Kaka, numbers anywhere from 130,000 to 250,000, and its traditional religion is the cult of Nyakang, which depends on two beliefs:

—The imminence in each Reth (king) of Nyakang, who was leader, cultural hero and first king of the Shilluk, one of three major tribes in the southern Sudan, an area greater than all France.

—The conviction that the Reth must not be allowed to become ill or senile or weak for fear this would bring ill health to crops and cattle and eventual death to tribal warriors.

Thus the Reth is killed ceremonially, although exactly how is a matter of speculation and the subject of much folklore. Murder is now a criminal offense under the state.

The present Reth, who has ruled since 1951, told an interviewer he is increasingly worried about his fate.

Outside the high reed fence enclosing his modern home, body guards, purportedly armed with pistols as well as highly visible spears, sit quietly.

Sitting on a chair on the verandah of his home, the king says "the danger is there," adding that his advice would be not to murder him or his successors.

Traditional kings and chiefs are banned in the northern part of the Sudan, Africa's largest country at nearly a million square miles, but continue in the south, serving as a vital link between civil administrators and tribal tradition.

The Reth, who carries the civil service title of first class magistrate, still holds tribal court under sprawling shade trees at the traditional capital of the Reth, Fashoda, a few miles upstream from his home at Kodok.

Education, Christian missionaries and Islam have weakened his role as divine king, the Reth says.

The brass door knobs of his modern European style home with its flat metal roof contrasts sharply with the homes of the previous kings in Fashoda, which were round, of reeds, and virtually identical with those of the other Shilluk.

A Reth's home is traditionally on a mound, but this one isn't, although it does keep the traditional number of bindings on the reed fence (eight for a Reth).

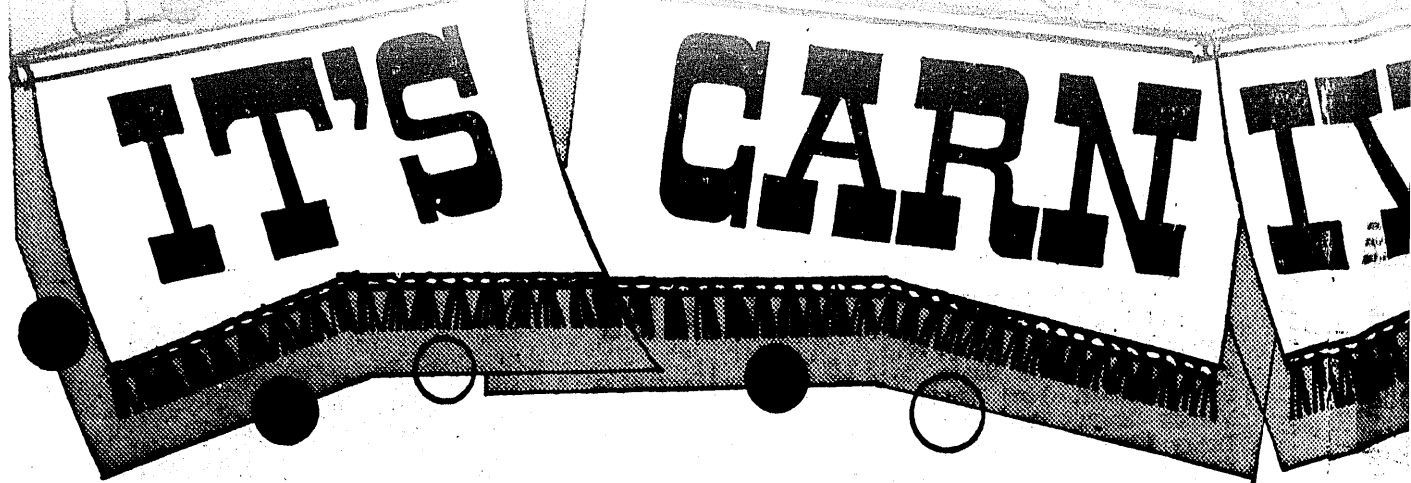

Traditionally the son of a previous king may challenge the reigning Reth in single combat, it being a disgrace for the Reth to call for help. If the challenger wins he becomes the new Reth, traditionally.

Assemblies Council

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI)—The Assemblies of God Council on Spiritual Life will be held in Minneapolis Aug. 14-16. Thirty-seven pastors, educators, laymen and district and national church leaders have been named to speak during the meeting.

Thomas F. Zimmerman, General Superintendent of the denomination, said a major objective of the Council will be "to consider what the Scriptures have to say on the very vital subject of spiritual maturity, that will make us more effective in the task of reaching our generation for Christ."

Safe Driving Tips May Help Vacation

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — More than 100 million Americans are expected to take to the nation's highways and byways this year on vacations and other pleasure jaunts.

But, according to responsible estimates, about 55,000 men, women and children will die in highway accidents during 1972. That's a bigger toll than U.S. combat deaths in Indochina in more than 11 years.

Experts maintain many accidents could be avoided or minimized if motorists took proper precautions and learned what to do in emergencies.

So we asked Frank A. Olson, vice president and general manager of Hertz Rent A Car, to compile a list of safe driving tips. Based on the observations of station managers and accident control specialists across the country, here they are:

1. Get Car Checked
Have your car checked to make sure it is in good condition —brakes, steering, tires (including spare), lights, battery, windshield wipers and washers, etc.
2. Carry a first-aid kit, preferably in the glove compartment. Take along a flashlight, and flares also could come in handy in the event of a breakdown or other emergency.
3. Make sure seat and shoulder belts are fastened before starting the engine. And that goes especially for the children.
4. Don't speed. And don't drive at posted speed limits unless weather and road conditions permit. Summer heat brings surface oil out of pavements and a light rain spreads an oil film, posing the danger of skidding.

5. Check rear and sideview mirrors when changing lanes or direction. Don't cut off oncoming cars, and leave plenty of clear space also before merging into the traffic flow on entering an expressway.

6. Avoid sudden stops —and don't back up if you missed your exit. Maintain safe distance from the car in front. If you are being tail-gated, slow down and let him pass.

7. Give ample warning if forced to slow down or stop. If your car is disabled, try to pull off the pavement and open the hood as a distress signal. Get everyone out of and away from the car and set up flares, if necessary, while awaiting help.

8. Stay alert. Avoid highway hypnosis by shifting driving positions and varying speeds from time to time. Keep the car well ventilated and stop for a coffee break every two hours.

9. If possible, don't drive in the lane next to oncoming traffic, except when passing. It cuts down the chances of being involved in a head-on collision.

10. If you've been drinking alcoholic beverages, smoking pot or taking narcotics, don't drive. You're a menace to yourself and others.

Olson also offered some tips for urban motorists who will be driving through the mountains and deserts for the first time.

In the mountains, drive to the right, especially on blind curves and hills; use second or low gear to help save brakes on steep downhill runs; make sure your radiator is full —water boils more readily at high altitudes; and have your carburetor adjusted if you plan to do much mountain driving. In the desert, check your tires before starting out and make sure pressure is normal or slightly below —it will build up on the hot roads; check the radiator at all stops as well as your fuel supply —as a precaution on long drives, carry jerry cans of gas and water; in case of a sandstorm pull well off the highway and stop —open windows on the side away from the wind and stay in the car; and don't wander either, if the car breaks down—there usually are periodic patrols of desert roads.

The average population per household in Florida decreased from 3.52 in 1940 to 2.90 in 1970.

December

DETROIT (UPI) — Eugene Gribble, the one and only Santa Claus to thousands of Detroit-area children, cannot keep his Christmas spirit in check—even now that he knows he may not live to see December.

Gribble, 53, a truck driver, has cancer and may not be able to share Christmas with others this year. But he still persists in getting his Christmas Fantasyland trailer put together for area youngsters.

"He was out fixing the new gingerbread house today and he has no business going out there so soon," his wife Lynne, 29, said Tuesday.

"I hope when I am 40 years old I have as much energy," she said. "He is always doing something for Christmas. This is a 10-months-a-year job for him."

The once dynamic Gribble, who has had eight tumors removed in the past three years, started his Christmas display in a small trailer in suburban Romulus. He now holds court in suburban Belleville in the 60-foot trailer he named Fantasyland and in the past 13 years more than 200,000 children have trooped through it to sit on his knee.

"Neighborhood children run to our house and ask Santa Gribble to get them the minibike their parents said they couldn't," Mrs. Gribble said.

Now Gribble, who spends one out of every five weeks in the University of Michigan Hospital for therapy, can hardly see the children who come to see him. In addition, he had to shave his white beard when it began to fall out.

"It killed him to get his beard cut off," his wife said.

Gribble's illness has made it impossible for him to work at his regular job and his main source of income now that his wife's job as a school bus driver ended Tuesday, is a $50 a week check from the Teamsters Union Health and Welfare Fund.

His wife said that no matter how bad things get he won't turn his Christmas gift making hobby into a profit-making venture.

"He would rather sell our home," she said.

Gribble, who still hopes to land by helicopter and proudly lead a Belleville parade featuring his eight life-sized reindeer in December, no longer can read the slogan printed on his Fantasyland trailer.

But the message it carries is his way of life. He knows it by heart.

"The joy that you give to others is the joy that comes back to you," the sign says.

CAN'T WAIT TO JUMP AGAIN

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (AP) — Skydiver Morrian Campbell, who survived an 8,000-foot fall with only one-third of his parachute open, says, "I can't wait to get back in the air again."

Making his 897th jump, Campbell, 35, plunged to the ground before hundreds of horrified spectators at a pageant at Dunedin in the South Island of New Zealand. He suffered critical internal injuries. Doctors administered 58 pints of blood in a series of transfusions.

Still in the hospital after two months, Campbell said: "I remember checking the altitude meter and pulling the ripcord, then waking up in hospital. . . . If I could get a clean bill of health I'd go up again tomorrow."

Wildflowers Bustin' Out All Over

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International
Because it's June, wildflowers are bustin' out all over.
Maybe you've never paid much attention to wildflowers. If so, you're missing something something lovely that is accessible to everyone, whether you live in the country, the suburbs, or the concrete canyons of a city.
The American Heritage Dictionary says a wildflower is "a flowering plant that grows in a natural, uncultivated state."
There's a reverse definition which may be more meaningful to city-dwellers and suburbanites: A weed is a wildflower growing where it's not wanted.
The dandelion is a good example. In a well-kept suburban lawn, it's a weed to be rooted out or poisoned with 2-4-D. In a rural field or along a roadside, it's a hardy member of the daisy family that flaunts its yellow rays from March through September. The crazy thing about dandelions is that they are able to take root and grow even in vacant lots and urban trash piles where no other living thing—even that durable creature, man—finds it easy to thrive.
Botanists are Puzzled
Botanists are frankly puzzled by the number, variety and hardiness of wildflowers to be found in the most inhospitable urban environments. Queen Anne's lace, milkweed, sweet clover and evening primrose are able to survive and bloom year after year, in asphalt jungles where there are no bees or butterflies to pollinate them, and where the very air seems will enough to asphyxiate them. They should not be there—but they are.
Along roadsides—even urban freeways and interurban super-highways—any motorist who bothers to look can find patches of bright blue chicory, waving yellow wands or goldenrod, prickly purple thistles, and thousands of tall-stemmed, tiny-flowered asters ranging in color from white to very pale lavender.
As you get deeper into open country, and if you love natural beauty enough to park your car and go for a walk through a park, a woods or a field, you may encounter in June a hairy puccoon. That may sound like a shaggy animal, but it's actually a delicate wildflower of the forget-me-not family that oozes prolifically throughout most of the United States in late spring and early summer. It's easily recognized by its five spreading yellow petals and coarsely hairy leaves. Of course, you may confuse it with the hoary puccoon unless you have a wildflower book at hand to tell you the small points of distinction between the hairy and hoary varieties. But no one has ever been known to suffer from falsely accusing a hoary puccoon of being a hairy puccoon, or vice versa.
Puccoons Seem Unconcerned
Puccoons seem entirely unconcerned about the names human beings apply to them. THEY know what they are, and they go on reproducing their kind with infinite precision year after year, generation after generation, century after century.
Why? That is the really fascinating question about wildflowers. Why do they exist, reproduce, proliferate in spite of all obstacles that man in his heedless pursuit of "progress" throws in their way?
Everyone will answer the question in terms of his own philosophy. Some will see in wildflowers a token of the incredible persistence, the determination to go on being, which seems to be a trait shared by all living things, of the plant and animal kingdoms. Others will shrug off the question as irrelevant and there, so who knows why, so what?
Still others will stare at the unplanned, unintended, unfertilized, profligate loveliness of a patch of sowthistle or daisy fleabane, and say to themselves that the deepest mystery of the universe lies not in the evil and ugliness which abound in it, but rather in the goodness and beauty which persist amidst its perils, in spite of everything.

Betty Canary Kids' Timing O.K.—For Them

I don't care what the feminists say, women are basically different from men. There is, for example, the unwritten rule, the natural law, which says a woman is never disturbed while doing hard, manual labor.
If this isn't true, then why don't children appear and ask for cookies when mother is mopping a floor? Why do children instinctively know to disappear when mother is heaving boxes or rearranging hundreds of heavy paint cans in the basement or moving furniture in the dining room?
I can't explain the scientific principal; I only know what happens.
If you are quietly washing woodwork in the front hall, your children play quietly in the backyard. If you think about stopping for a cup of coffee (you've said nothing aloud, you're only thinking) those same children suddenly appear at your elbow to demand band-

In the same week, Elvis Presley and Joan Baez were in New York. At a press confer-

Apt Ideas

By JIM HUFFNAGEL
Written for Associated Press

Breaking an apartment lease is a touchy subject. The best time to move out of an apartment is at the end of the lease. The owner is given his stipulated 30 or 60 or 90 days notice and the tenant leaves the place on time and in good shape. Everything remains friendly and strictly legal.

But sometimes it's difficult to perfectly synchronize a life with a lease. Things happen and whatever the reason, it's rough to wiggle out of a lease that is still current.

That doesn't mean, however, that the tenant shouldn't take the first opportunity to chat with the owner or manager and find out his policy.

In most states, an owner has three broad alternatives:

- He can leave the apartment vacant after the tenant moves out and continue to collect his full rent—suing if the tenant doesn't pay.
- He can forget about the lease, re-renting the apartment or not as he likes.
- He can take over the place in the tenant's behalf and sublet it.

Other possibilities combine features from two or even all three of these general options.

Let's examine these three alternatives from the owner's point of view as well as from the renter's.

The option to continue the lease is one which most renters would want to avoid. It means that the tenant has to continue paying rent on an empty apartment he no longer wants. It's not the best situation for the owner either. Vacant apartments are eyesores, invitations to vandalism, and make the building or complex seem object.

Increasingly, leases are expressly forbidding subletting. Many, however, agree to the compromise that if the tenant finds a new person to take over the apartment, the owner won't tire building or complex seem object.

Another option of ending the lease is usually the most desirable—termination by mutual consent. If the owner has a waiting list or knows desirable apartments are in short supply, he might be able to re-rent for more than the present tenant is paying.

But if rentals are going slowly or if the owner anticipates the tenant's leaving will cause him heavy expenses for advertising or redecorating, he may refuse.

The trickiest of the three alternatives is subletting—and maybe the least advisable from both the tenant's and the owner's points of view. It means the owner has to deal with an absentee tenant and the new resident is square in the middle of the landlord-tenant relationship.

Increasingly, leases are expressly forbidding subletting. Many, however, agree to the compromise that if the tenant finds a new person to take over the apartment, the owner won't tire building or complex seem object.

SAIGON (NEA)—It is 3 a.m. world. An explosion has just erupted near the city. The air conditioner in my hotel room is not working. A mosquito has sucked a liter of blood from my neck. My toilet bowl will not turn off and the gurgles are picking at my brain. A lizard is staring at me from the night table. I fear the overhead fan, smoking furiously, is about to break and cut me in pieces.

I tell you this for your own good, reader.

I say beware.

There is a movement under way in South Vietnam to upgrade the nation's tourism image. Government officials, looking beyond the war, which is looking quite a ways indeed, have begun a small propaganda campaign designed to lure vationers here from around the world.

"Vietnam is not all bombs and booby traps," says Ta thien Thanh, chief of the National Tourist Office. He says: "Already, people are very interested in us." Seventy two thousand visitors were officially listed as tourists in 1971. Thanh expects the figures to double or triple or more. Take Saigon, he says: "It is a charming city. The streets are wide and lined with trees. The shops are quaint. The people are friendly. And taxi rides are very available."

Again, I say, as I swat mosquitoes at 3 a.m.: Beware.

Saigon has all the charm of a clenched fist. Some of the streets are wide, but they have to be to accommodate one million maniacs on motorbikes. Pe-

Yale President Actively Demonstrating Concern

By MARC CHARNEY
Associated Press Writer
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Yale President Kingman Brewster Jr. says, "The Constitution is too important to leave to the courts. And politics is too important to leave to the politicians."

"It's a terrible American weakness to believe that if you've got a problem all you have to do is pass a law," he says. "It may be important to pass the law and observe it, but even more important in the long run is the active concern of the private citizen for the values involved."

In the past two months, Brewster has been following his own advice—stepping outside the customary aloofness of his office on several occasions to publicly criticize the Indochina war and some of President Nixon's domestic policies.

In an interview at Yale, Brewster said the Nixon administration has been "excessively impatient" with constitutional safeguards—but he added that Nixon is only continuing a historical trend toward more imperious and more distant government.

"There's been a lot of buck-passing in the constitutional field," he said. "Everybody expects that defending the Constitution is somebody else's job. And not enough attention to the fact that basically the Constitution, as an expression of a value system, is everybody's business."

At a time of increased distance between government and citizens, he said, it is more than a question of one issue. "I'm encouraging others, not to agree with me, but to be concerned about the problem" and to speak up or join groups or take part in some other way, he said.

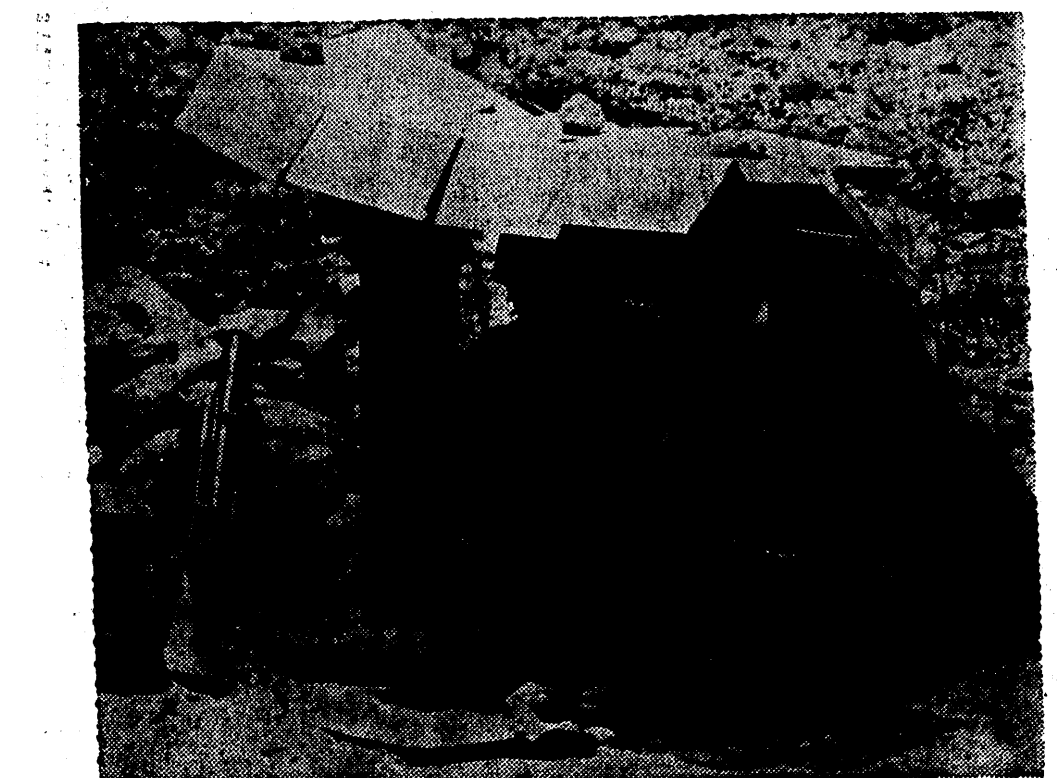

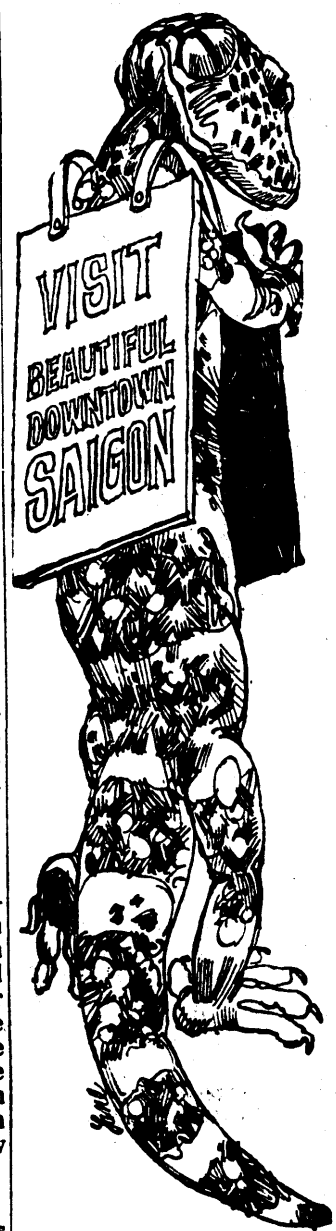

Brewster has spoken out before on public issues but rarely with the regularity of recent weeks. This activism—like that of several other college presidents—surfaced two months ago with the stepped-up bombing of North Vietnam and the mining of North Vietnamese ports. He said at the time that he disapproved of disruptive demonstrations and was seeking another form of protest for his students.

Late last month, he told graduating seniors at Notre Dame University that "deep divisions, disapprovals, and distrust... have been sown throughout the land by the 'if you are not for me, you are against me' rhetoric of the President, the vice president and other administration spokesmen."

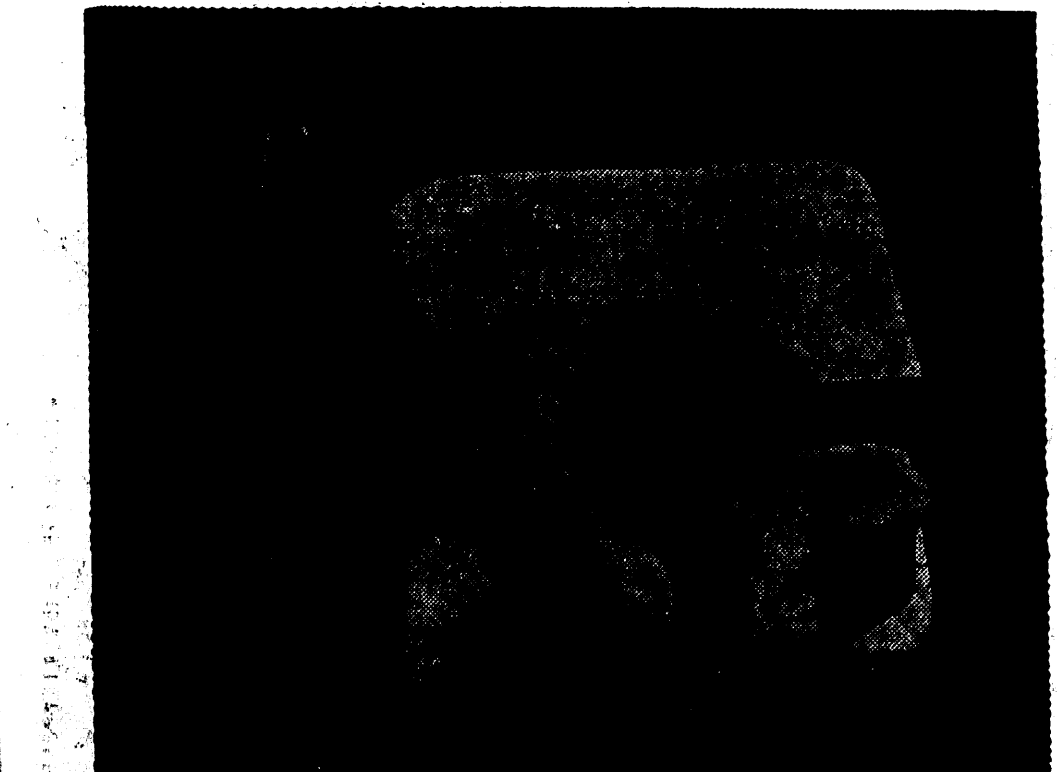

In a baccalaureate address to Yale seniors last Sunday and in the interview, Brewster praised students working for Sen. George McGovern, such groups as the American Civil Liberties Union and peace groups which he said had been pilloried a decade ago when they advocated a nuclear arms agreement. New forms of citizen participation are needed too, he said, but he offered no new suggestions.

Defying weather
COPENHAGEN (UPI) — Although summer weather in Denmark is fickle, with a liberal distribution of rain and sunshine, more than 50 outdoor restaurants are available to the visitor in Copenhagen. More than a dozen are located on the Stroget, a mile-long pedestrian promenade linking the Town Hall Square and the King's New Square.

The Nile River is 4,145 miles long.

BETTER THAN NOTHING is about the description of this shelter in a South Vietnamese battle area in the Chan Thanh region.

WHAT'S AN AVANT-GARDE SCULPTURE like this doing in the capital of the Republic? In startling contrast with the venerable architecture around it, controversial sculptor Henry Moore's massive "Square Form with Cut" occupies a highly visible spot atop the Belvedere Fort in Hanoi. The 17-ton white marble work is composed of 30 segments.

Saigon, of course, is a more or less singular calamity in Vietnam. The other major cities are more wretched than bad. But for tourists, or anybody, wanting to, as they say, "get the feel of the country," the grip is quick in coming—often around the neck.

Travel accommodations predate the Crusades. Some decent airplanes are available, but tickets often must be bought on the black market, and as the lady who sells them says: "Plane go, you go. Plane no go, you no go." And sometimes when you do go, you wish you hadn't. I recall a trip a couple of years ago where the craft had engine trouble; while we were still at 25,000 feet every passenger rushed for the exit, including the stewardess and, I swear, one of the pilots.

There are railroads, certainly. The one from Hue to Da Nang is called by the locals: "The train that doesn't go." It looks like the one Lincoln campaigned in. I got on it recently, waited an hour, then was told to get off. "Fini," the conductor said. Which, presumably—one is never informed—there are the friendly people—over road nudes and they run into rivers. When I couldn't get the train from Hue, I took a bus. Only I couldn't sit down because the seats were filled with chickens and pigs. I stood in the aisle awhile, then climbed out on the back bumper and, hanging on, spent the next 50 miles counting my beads.

But even when one does get to his destination here, the battle isn't over. What hotels there are, are equipped with fly-swatters, rusty water and roomboys who remove ticks with lighted cigarettes. The food is fairly reasonable, considering the trimmings: cockroach wings in the eggs, ants in the butter (if there is any butter), and, in one personal case, a fishy eye in the tomato soup. Finally, there are the friendly people—

There are 865 species of trees registered with the American Forestry Association as native to the continental United States.

The Asmat people of New Guinea's West Irian still practice headhunting.

This is the first of three stories which examine Micronesia, whose 2,000 islands are scattered across the Western Pacific, administered since World War II by the United States under a trusteeship agreement with the United Nations.

Edward Johnston, raised and educated in Jacksonville, has been the high commissioner of the Trust Territory since his appointment by President Nixon in May 1969.

Johnston, the son of Mrs. Emma Johnston of 197 S. Prairie St., was graduated from Jacksonville High School in 1935 and Illinois College in 1939. He received the honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Illinois College in 1970.

Johnston was appointed secretary of the Territory of Hawaii by President Eisenhower in 1958 and was acting governor of Hawaii until its statehood in August 1959. He was the chairman of the Republican Party of Hawaii between 1965 and 1969.

Edward Johnston

By DICK KLEINER
SAIPAN (NEA) — Words and phrases which most Americans have never heard — "reintegration" and "status talks" and "free association" — have the western Pacific area in a tizzy.

Micronesia, an area as big as the continental United States, is facing a political crisis that could have major international significance. Since World War II, the more than 2,000 islands that make up this vast and romantic part of the world have been governed by the United States under a trusteeship granted by the United Nations.

Increasingly, the 100,000 Micronesians have become restless. But there is no unanimity as to what they want. Some, particularly in the Marshall Islands and those in and around Truk, favor complete independence.

Others, mostly around Guam (Guam, although part of Micronesia, is not part of the Trust Territory; it has been a U.S. possession since 1898) and Saipan and the other Marianas Islands, want statehood or "reintegration." And others favor a kind of commonwealth arrangement they are calling "free association."

A series of status talks has begun in Palau between representatives of the U.S. Congress and State Department and members of the Congress of Micronesia. The object is to come to some kind of agreement on the area's future.

There have been similar talks before without any conclusion. Even if an agreement is reached, it must be ratified three times — by the U.S. Congress, the Congress of Micronesia and the people in a plebiscite.

before it can be formalized. A series of incidents, Johnston's advice, Japanese people on remote islands.

One point that the United States will insist on is a continuation of its military bases in the area, particularly an air base on Tinian and missile testing installations on Kwajalein and Eniwetok in the Marshalls.

But there are some Micronesian extremists who want the United States out, everywhere.

Saipan is the seat of the TTPI — Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands — and extremism has taken its toll here. The home of Edward Johnston the high commissioner, was burned down and is today just a concrete shell sitting high on a hill. Johnston will not say that the fire was the work of independence advocates, and others insist the arsonist was just a "nut."

But the fire was only one in

What makes Johnston, a Hawaiian, maddest is that the fire consumed his most prized possession, the pen President Eisenhower used to sign the Hawaiian statehood act.

"This is only happening on Saipan," he says. "It's a small but vocal minority, a group who wants to take over."

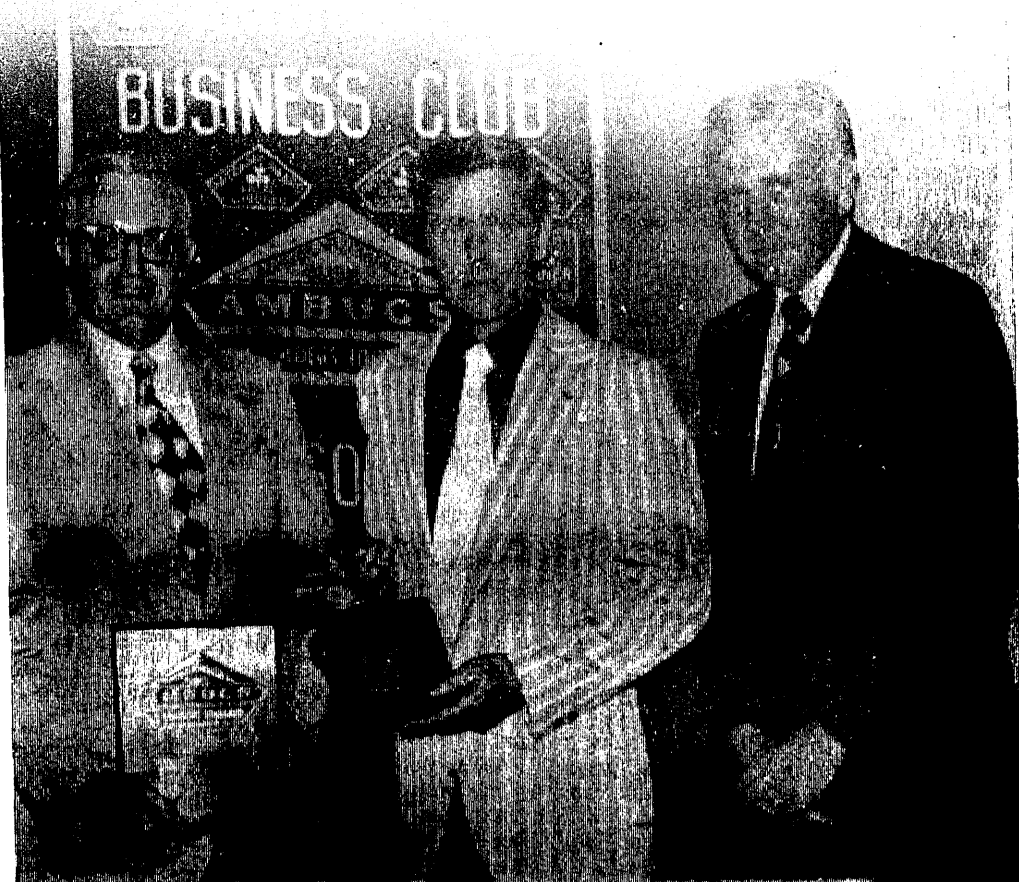

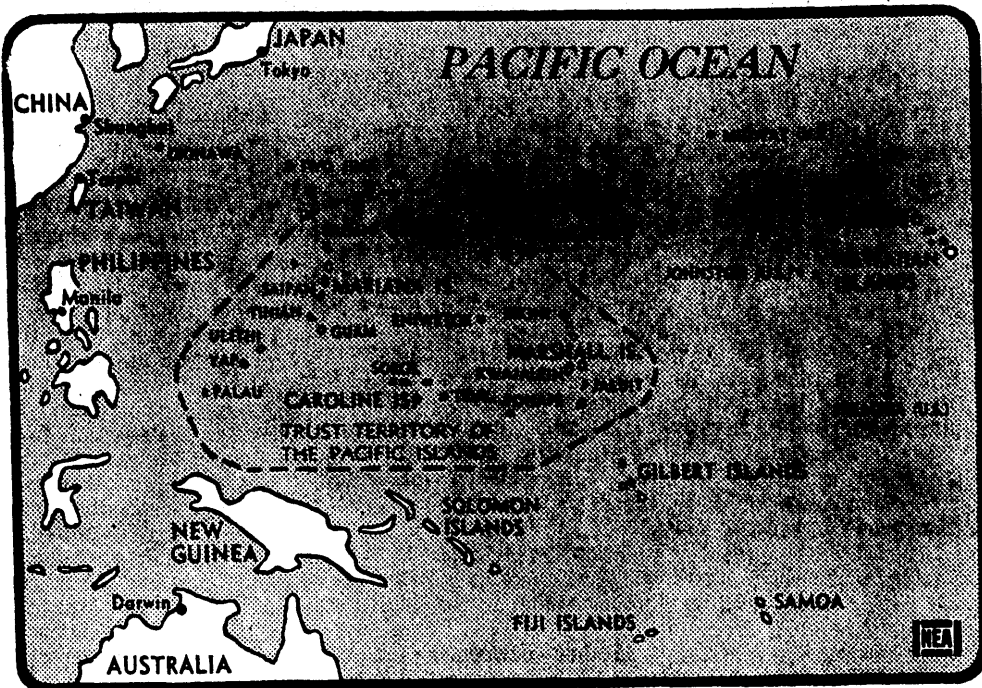

The Micronesian situation is a confused one mainly because the area is so vast and encompasses people of varying sorts. Nine languages are spoken in the TTPI's six districts. The Micronesians vary from the

They have many strains, dating from the native Melanesian and Polynesian, to the addition of Spanish, German and Japanese from previous owners. There is still a strong pro-Japanese feeling in the Marshall and Palau districts, long under Japanese occupation. Many of these people have Japanese blood.

America's trusteeship is either hotly defended or severely criticized, depending on whom you talk to. Johnston admitted that the area had a long tradition of enslavement.

"Not since the 1500s," he said, "have the Micronesians been asked what they wanted."

But he believed the trusteeship, although it started slowly, was picking up momentum.

TOP HONORS: The American Business Club's top honor, "Mr. Ambuc," was given to Jim Flowers (c) at local club's new officer installation banquet Friday evening. With Flowers are Past President Bob Linde (l) and President Don Shumaker (r).

And, in fact, you can see signs — schools, roads, hospitals — indicating some thought and expenditure. The budget has risen from $2.5 million annually to the current $60 million, a small sum compared to other U.S. outlays, but relatively large for an area of 100,000 people.

Still there are many who feel otherwise. They say the United States hasn't done enough, and point to the island of Koror, where there hasn't been a foot of paved road or an inch of sewer pipe put down in our nearly 30 years of trusteeship.

Some of these critics say the United States embarked on a "zoo period" in Micronesia in which they just "tended" the people. Even these critics, however, believe that things have begun to change lately, perhaps in a direct ratio with an increase in tourism.

Rep. Wayne Aspinall (D-Colo.), chairman of the House Interior Committee which administers the trusteeship, said the big problem was that three governmental departments — State, Defense and Interior — all had a stake in the islands and a share in the governing process.

But Aspinall thought that it would all work out.

"The realists don't want statehood," he said. "They know they aren't fit, economically or geographically, for that. They'd like to be a territory, as Hawaii used to be."

Aspinall greatly admired Micronesia and its people, and said that the Guamanians are "probably the most loyal people anywhere in the United States — more loyal than any mainland state."

But other areas do not feel that way. And a Micronesian joke is an indication of how they think the U.S. politicians think of their homeland.

"Senator," someone is supposed to have asked a legislator, "what do you think about Micronesia?"

"Mike Who?" the senator is supposed to have replied.

DO-IT-YOURSELF

Summer Is Furnace Care Time

By MR. FIX

Your furnace stands a better chance of falling apart in the summer when it is off than it does in the winter when it is working.

The soot and dirt in the cold, unused furnace absorb moisture. The combination results in an acid that will corrode metal surfaces.

On a gas-fired furnace, keep the pilot light on. It gives off very little heat, certainly not enough to affect the temperature of your house. Keeping it on, however, will keep down the amount of moisture.

Obviously the best way to avoid corrosion is to keep your furnace clean. A vacuum cleaner makes the job easy. Run a cleaning attachment into the furnace as far as you can. Once you have cleaned the interior surfaces, spray them with light oil. Use an insect spray if you can't have an aerosol can of machine oil.

Metal pipes, made of thinner material than the furnace itself, are especially susceptible to corrosion. If you can take these pipes apart it is a good idea to do so and give them a thorough cleaning with a stiff brush.

Check the filter on a forced air system. Replace it if it is very dirty.

This is the time to lubricate the blower motor and fan. Check manufacturer's instructions for oiling points. Don't forget that some motors are self-lubricating. Check the belt to see that it isn't too loose.

If you have a furnace with a water boiler, resist the temptation to drain and refill it with fresh water. The water that has been heated all winter is the best thing for the boiler. This old water has no air in it and will not have a corrosive effect. Refilling with fresh water admits air and the trouble starts. Add only enough water to fill it.

Fall is the time for complete draining and refilling. Remember that fresh water adds sediment that goes to the bottom of the boiler.

With oil systems, keep the fuel tank full. Condensation forms on the surfaces of an empty or partially empty tank. The moisture runs down into the oil.

Protect the oil burner over the summer. Turn off the current and the gas ignition if it has one. Clean nozzle and other metal parts and coat with oil. Any mechanism outside the furnace should be protected from dirt by wrapping.

While the furnace humidifier is off, drain it and clean.

Tan tip

CHICAGO (UPI) — Some persons claim that mineral oil or baby oil mixed with iodine makes a good suntan lotion. In a pamphlet on "Sun and Your Skin" the American Medical Association comments on suntan lotion by saying: "The fact is that these preparations do not contain sunscreens and therefore will not promote tanning or prevent burning. Their only benefit is that they provide lubrication to cut down on the drying effects of the sun."

Weekly Alumni Magazine

Editor's Note — It isn't the nation's oldest weekly, as its masthead claims, but Princeton's alumni magazine does come out every seven days. And that's something no other alumni magazine can say.

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — More than 300 American colleges have alumni magazines or newsletters, but only Princeton has a weekly.

"The next most frequent alumni magazine is a monthly," says Landon Y. Jones, the young editor of the Princeton Alumni Weekly—PAW. He adds with a laugh, "We're utterly insane. We're way out ahead of the rest."

The PAW was, in fact, out ahead of most other weekly magazines in America, having celebrated its 72nd birthday last March.

It is not, as its masthead occasionally avers, "the oldest weekly magazine in the United States"—both the Nation and Publisher's Weekly are older—but it believes it does have, as Jones claims, "the best letters column in the country."

"The letters are filled with sound and fury," says the 28-year-old Jones, who has edited PAW since 1969. Frequently, he says, the content is more emotional than intellectual.

Campus controversies invariably spawn a stream of letters which generate more letters, with alumni arguing their viewpoints with the zeal of medieval theologians.

Occasionally an angry alumnus will write to announce he will no longer contribute to his alma mater. Since Princeton reaps more than $3 million a year from its 35,000 alumni, this is taken as a serious threat.

Raising money is invariably a function of all alumni magazines. PAW's editor sees it as "one of the ancillary benefits of the Alumni Weekly." He adds, however, "there are some people who say it costs the university contributors."

PAW is autonomous from the university administration. Jones has a free rein to determine what appears in the magazine, which is paid for by the alumni's class dues and advertising revenue.

Although PAW's editorial staff consists of only two—Jones and class notes editor, Helen deF. Lee—it does not rely on the university's public relations office to write its copy.

Jones, a 1966 Princeton graduate who worked for Time magazine for three years, writes some of the articles himself and pays contributors for the rest.

Jones likes to draw a distinction between PAW and other alumni magazines, most of which "are just craven house organs," he says.

"PAW really communicates. It's a very personal magazine and easy to read," he says. "It's short, but not lightweight. We don't use academic English, or write in professional tones, but most of our articles are serious."

The articles in recent months have varied from a professor's report recommending that Princeton be made a three-year college, to a long piece on the selection of Princeton's new president.

PAW consistently has been ranked among the nation's top 10 alumni magazines, although both Davies and Jones admit the pressure of publishing weekly keeps the magazine from reaching top form in every issue.

It would be difficult to say with certainty that you haven't eaten any seaweed today. You probably have consumed some without knowing it, so extensive has its use become.

Seaweed is a common sight as you walk along the beach. Some varieties cling to rocks; wharves or overturned boats; others are washed ashore by the tides.

Seaweed is very useful to man, the New York Botanical Garden reports in its Junior Bulletin.

Seaweeds are algae and there are several thousand species. Between Maine and Southern Florida alone, it is estimated there are 750 species.

While resembling land plants, seaweeds are much more primitive in the evolutionary scale. They have no flowers, leaves or roots and reproduce by means of spores and cell division.

When you look at a piece of seaweed, the Botanical Garden reminds, you are seeing a descendant of plants that grew in the ocean hundreds of millions of years ago, ages before the first sea plants had begun their new and precarious life on land.

Seaweed contains chlorophyll and manufactures its own food through photosynthesis, as green plants do that live in the soil. They require sunlight to survive. Generally, they grow in shallow seas but, at the equator where the sun's rays penetrate straight down, they can grow a thousand feet below the surface.

Some kinds are tiny, others, such as Pacific Coast kelp, are huge. Some resembles trees in growth. Some are like grass, as in the Sargasso Sea, through Stories of ships being trapped in the Sargasso Sea have been disproven by modern science.

Seaweeds come in green, red and brown color. Green algae constitute 5 per cent of the total and live in warmer waters, as do the red. The more common brown prefers colder water.

Many coastal residents use seaweed as a fertilizer on farms and as food for livestock. Certain species are prized in China and Japan as food (used as spinach and in salad); industries for gathering Irish moss process this type in Maine and Massachusetts.

Seaweed is used in many foods. Processed, seaweed has a jelly-like consistency that provides a fine binder or stabilizer and thickener. It will hold considerable water.

About half of all ice cream, we are told, contains seaweed to prevent formation of ice crystals and give it smoother texture. It is used to moisten, thicken or stabilize chocolate milk, soda fountain syrups, jelly candies, marshmallows, candy bars, cheese spreads, jams, jellies, soups, sauces, gravies, salad dressings, chutney and meringue pies and fruit cake.

Cosmetics, toothpaste, molds for dentistry, paints, iodine and other medications, including "seal-in pills that regulate the rate of solution of a capsule"—all utilize seaweed.

Seaweed contributes importantly to production of the food that supports all animal life in the sea.

A couple of hundred years ago, Paul Revere rode through the countryside alerting people to be prepared that the British were coming.

Today, as plans are being made to mark the bicentennial of that revolution, another call is being made to Americans. This time it's to stamp collectors, asking them to help promote interest in the bicentennial celebration. The cry for aid comes from the Philatelic Advisory Panel of the Bicentennial Commission.

The panel is requesting that stamp clubs come to the fore in their local communities and create awareness of the historical event by having exhibits with the bicentennial commissions set up by the governor and legislatures in each state welcome the efforts of local stamp clubs and are available to coordinate and assist with their endeavors.

Chapin said that the panel is setting up an awards program for the best bicentennial exhibit in the 20 major national stamp shows including a bicentennial theme in the all-youth exhibition to be held in the spring of 1973.

As collectors know, the 1972 Bicentennial series of four stamps featuring colonial craftsmen will be issued at Williamsburg, Va., July 4.

The satellite stamp shows a circling satellite and a dish-type radiowave reflector. The book adhesive features a multicolored design indicating an open book. The stamp dedicated to Rabbi Yitzhak ben Shlomo portrays a murky symbolism utilizing floating Hebrew letters. He was called by his followers 400 years ago, "The Ari," meaning "lion."

Botswana, located in the center of southern Africa, has turned to the night sky for a series of four new stamps. One stamp depicts the constellation "Orion" with the stars Betelgeuse, Rigel and Bellatrix, approximately 1,500 light years from earth. A second stamp highlights Scorpius with its stinger star Shaula. A third adhesive shows the night sky over Borswana noting the constellation Centaurus. The fourth features Crux, sometimes called the Southern Cross.

An extensive cover collection accumulated by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway during his long military career has been donated by him to the Cardinal Spellman Philatelic Museum.

"The collection has great historical value," said Sister Fidelma Conway, executive director of the Spellman Museum.

"By means of this collection we can trace the career of the general from the time he was a captain in Nicaragua in the early 1930s to the time he replaced Gen. MacArthur as supreme commander."

At the request of Sister Fidelma, Gen. Ridgway autographed over 50 covers in the collection. Now retired, the general lives in Pittsfield.

The Spellman Museum is located on the campus of Regis College, Weston, Mass.

Monkey Protection

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Few species of monkeys will survive in South America by the end of this century unless strong protection measures are taken, a Brazilian naturalist says.

Fernando Dias De Avila-Pires urges that if the continent's monkeys are to survive, laws for controlling exports must be toughened, conservation improved in the natural habitat of the animals and a gancies making research grants should keep the number of monkeys used in research "inside the proper limits of real need."

De Avila-Pires is one of 20 contributors from nine countries discussing South American primates in the 1972 "International Zoo Yearbook" published by the Zoological Society of London.

The 16 articles on the subject discuss the status of New World monkeys, the trade in them—which is principally to the United States—the characteristics of some species, and breeding result at zoos in Australia, Britain and Japan.

In 1968 more than 70,000 New World monkeys were exported to the U.S. alone and an estimated half-million in the last 10 years.

Most of them are exported through Peru and Colombia. Against these figures, only about 150 New World monkeys are born in U.S. zoos annually.

These monkeys, says De Avila-Pires "are used for biomedical research, drug testing and vaccine production. They also are employed in space research and sold by the thousand as pets. Estimates are that two or three animals die during capture and transportation for each one that arrives alive at its destination.

"Not only does man extract these animals from the wild, he also destroys their habitat. As a result, the pressures on their populations are becoming insupportable and they face the danger of rapid and complete extermination," he says.

The monkey pet trade also plays a part in the threat to monkeys in the wild.

New World monkeys are widely distributed in wooded parts of Central and South America, from Southern Mexico through Colombia, Venezuela, the Guianas, Brazil, northeast Argentina, Paraguay, Bolivia, Amazonian Peru, and Ecuador.

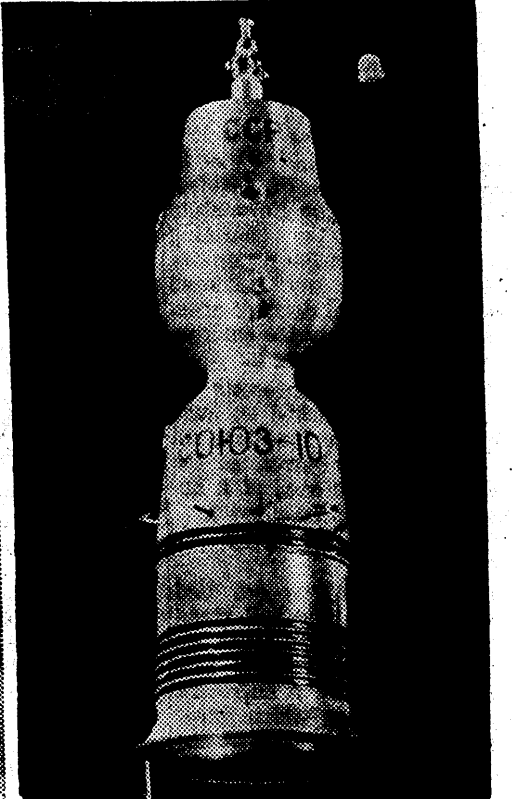

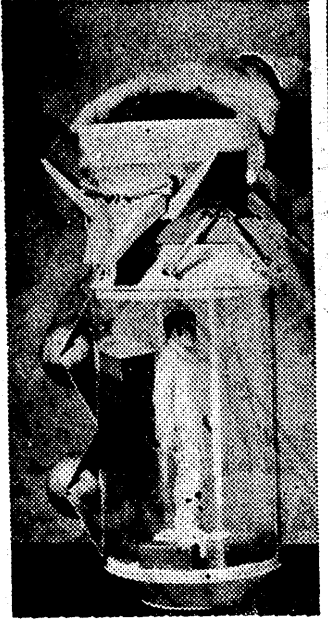

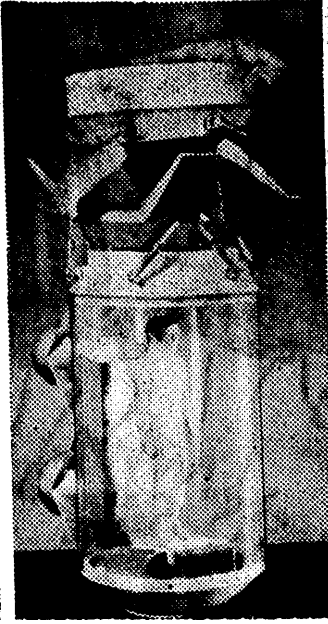

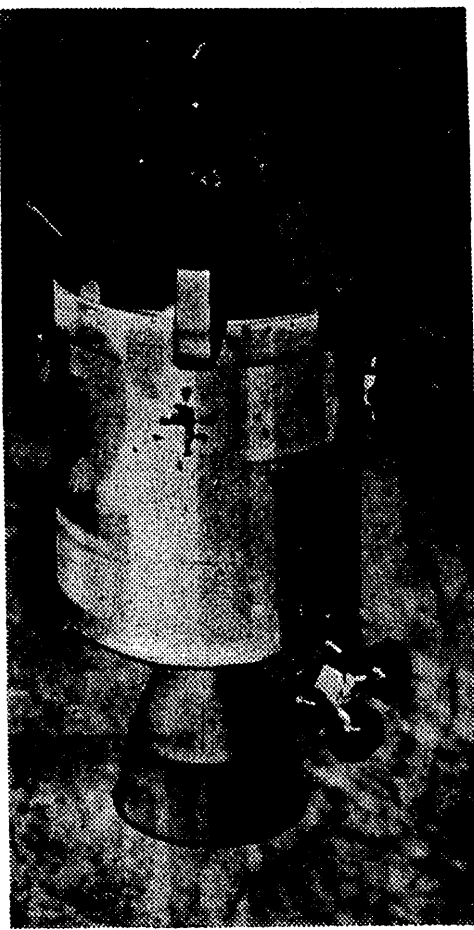

The year book says that in the tropical forests monkeys are staple articles of human diet. "Woolly monkeys are particularly relished. During the peak of the fruiting season, woolies become exceedingly fat, their flesh meltingly tender and delicately flavored with no trace of gaminess."

De Avila-Pires says, however, that the taking of monkeys for food by forest-dwellers "does not represent a threat to the survival of the species involved. Trading for various purposes, on the other hand, is a serious menace."

By IRVING DESFOR

AP Newfeatures
Reading some offbeat photo publications recently, I've found some nuggets of information to share with you.

For instance, other photo organizations might like the idea of "Critique Night" as conducted recently by the New York section of the Society of Photographic Education. The event was described by editor Jacob Deschin, former photographic columnist for the New York Sunday Times, in "The Photo Reporter," a monthly publication of Modernage Labs.

For the occasion, a group of photographic authorities were invited to sit as a jury. Before them appeared, in turn, any photographers willing to pay $3 each for the privilege of a personal, but public, evaluation of photographs they had taken. There was also a spectators' gallery—people who paid $1.50 each just to sit, watch and listen to the picture appraisals.

With a panel of knowledgeable, vocal or controversial critics, such an event can be educational, an exciting free-for-all or just fun. It might also be another method to raise funds for a camera club or photo group.

Another item in "The Photo Reporter" told the story of Steve and Susan James of Monterey, Calif., a business-minded couple who discovered that when adversity strikes, photographers have a heart.

Steve bought an old camera shop in Monterey with ideas of modernizing it. A major innovation was introduced by his wife, Sue. She converted the back room of the shop into a separate photographic gallery.

With some previous experience in an art center, Sue prepared the walls for the exhibition of fine photographic prints. To provide ample illumination, 170 tungsten spotlights of 150 watts each were installed for the 40-foot gallery space.

It became evident after the joint venture had been in operation for a while, that it was as successful as it had promised to be in theory. And then disaster struck!

A short circuit in the shop's old wiring started a fire that wrecked the store, the gallery and the couple's financial resources. Discouraged and broke, Steve and Sue were ready to give up but local photographers had other ideas. They got together and provided more than a vote of confidence—they helped raise funds to restore the camera shop and the Eikon Gallery.

Steve and Sue James are back in business now and the community has more than a shop for photo supplies... it has a gallery which is a source of inspiration for local photographers and residents who can get fine-quality photographs for home decoration.

The final item shows that in photography as in other fields, "where there's a will, there's a way." It comes from a letter published in the School of Modern Photography Newsletter, from a student.

While some camera fans get uptight because they don't have a fully equipped darkroom to work in, others struggle under unbelievable adversities. Like Henry Milam who was a long way from his home in Havelock, N.C.

Milam said he was a G.I. in Vietnam, and out in the fields at that; when he had taken some pictures and was proceeding to process them according to the student lesson.

"I had the developer but my problem was getting a can of fixer," he reported. "I traveled about 175 miles through enemy-infested territory before locating a source of supply. Next problem: a darkroom. Naturally, we had no equipped darkroom in the field in our company so I decided it had to be my tent. Then I improvised two field helmets to serve as trays, the water bucket was the water supply and a soda pop can was a measuring cup for mixing solutions.

"I waited till late at night to do my developing because the tent wasn't lightproof. When everyone had retired and it was quiet and dark, I started to work. Seconds after the negatives were in the developer, an artillery round came in. I was afraid the flash of the explosion would spoil the film but luck was with me and no damage showed up."

It sounds more like pluck and ingenuity which enabled Milam to finish his lesson. If he keeps at it, it's a cinch he'll make a good photographer. He has learned to cope with handicaps and overcome them!

Florida Keys Are Long, But Memories Are Short

EDITOR'S NOTE—The Florida Keys are long, but memories are short. The chain of coral spits stretching out onto the sea are undergoing a massive building boom which sometimes overlooks man-made laws. Not to mention nature's killing creations, hurricanes.

By BEN FUNK
Associated Press Writer
KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — In the feverish pace of development of the Florida Keys, state officials warn the charming islands unique in the nation are being dredged and bulldozed into an ecological disaster area.

But it is not only the environment that is threatened. In mushrooming forests of mobile homes—parked on huge expanses of white limestone fill as treeless and barren as the Gobi Desert—the seed of a human tragedy has been sown.

It will sprout when the hurricane comes. If modern trailers are tied down properly, they will stand winds of 100 to 125 miles an hour. When the velocity hits 150, they fly apart. A hurricane like 1960's Donna, which threw gusts of 180 to 200 mph at the Keys, would splinter the trailers and hurl the pieces into the sea.

There is no question about that, says forecaster Neal Frank of the National Hurricane Center at Miami. A hurricane like Donna could bring the greatest human disaster the islands have ever known.

In the low-lying Keys that string out across open seas from Jewish Creek to Key West, it is not just the hurricane wind that strikes fear. Far more dangerous are the waves that come with it, slashing across the islands from ocean to gulf.

An advertisement for one of the new mobile home communities boasts that it stands eight feet above sea level. Donna hurled a 13-foot tide across the Keys. In the Labor Day hurricane of 1935, the storm surge reached 15 to 20 feet.

The rapidly growing number of trailer occupants also raises the specter that many could be trapped when the hurricane strikes.

Two-lane U.S. Highway 1, the only road down the 108-mile long chain, is clogged even in day-to-day circumstances. If there were panic and a mass exodus, traffic could bog down totally. Thousands caught on the road, with few substantial buildings to give them shelter, could perish.

It was August, 1960 when Donna howled through the Keys, smashing concrete and steel commercial buildings and homes, ripping trailer homes to bits, hurling oceangoing ships ashore, and isolating most of the islands behind collapsed bridges.

Many residents who fled as Donna came roaring up from the south returned to find piles of debris where their homes had stood. Some left the area, never to return. For two years in the hurricane's wake the islands were in economic distress.

The hardy ones stayed to rebuild and, gradually, the ordeal was forgotten and development was resumed. It was slow at first, then picked up steam, and in the last year has become a rampage.

"Horrible things are being done to the environment of the Keys," said executive director Joel Kuperberg of the state Internal Improvement Fund after an aerial survey in March. Unless action is taken quickly, he said, indiscriminate dredging and filling will destroy the islands' natural resources.

Glenn Ulrich, Monroe County field inspector for the IIF, said dozens of mobile home projects were altering the entire character of the Keys, wiping out all the wild beauty that brought residents and tourists to them in the first place.

Nobody knows how many projects are under construction. It all happened so fast. Without notice, the developers moved in with bulldozers and draglines, many to sites hidden from the highway.

In the past, the Monroe County leadership did not look on the Keys as one of the most attractive regions of America. Rather, it viewed them as a land of the fast buck.

"The ethic of a property owner being able to do whatever he wishes to his property is firmly entrenched in this county," says Ulrich. "If this concept is followed in years to come, the Keys will be transformed into a straight-lined, bulkheaded housing subdivision of the Miami megalopolis."

One-fourth of Florida's commercial fishing catch is landed in the Keys. This fishing resource exists primarily because of the productive grass flats and the red mangroves which supply abundant marine organisms eaten by fish and wading birds. With the destruction of the mangroves, sportsmen say fishing has started to decline.

Thousands of new trailer homes use septic tanks. Because of the thin soil of the Keys, the sewage seeps quickly into the surrounding waters. High density developments hold as many as 12 trailers to an acre.

The state Pollution Control Board has imposed a dredge-and-fill moratorium and banned new septic tank permits until the county comes up with plans for sewage treatment facilities and water quality control.

"I think our intent is to hold back development," says attorney David Levin, chairman of the board. "This may be the answer eventually to our problem."

But Keys builders say the state will have a long court fight before it can stop development. Cliff Miller, chairman of the Upper Keys Association of General Contractors, says the board's right to issue restrictive orders will be challenged and "we expect to win."

Years ago, a prodigal state of Florida sold some 20,000 acres of submerged Keys land to private owners for a pittance. Most of it remains undeveloped and millions can be made if Under state law, Valois has that right. But the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has demanded that construction stop at the high water line. The engineers have sent Valois a cease and desist order.

Valois is adamant. "I have a deed," he said, "and I intend to build."

In a landmark federal case, Joseph Moretti, owner and developer of a project at Hammer Point on Key Largo, has been ordered to restore the area to its natural state.

Last Sept. 2, after Moretti had sold 180 of 261 lots, U.S. District Judge W. O. Mehrrens issued a permanent injunction and ordered restoration of the area. Moretti's cost of moving 400,000 cubic yards of rock, closing finger canals and the boat channel is estimated at $600,000.

The case is being appealed, but officials hope the Moretti decision will serve as a warning to developers not to start work without permits. Both state and federal authorities

On Saturday morning, June 10, a group of 17 Boy Scouts accompanied by eight adults were present for the ribbon cutting ceremony officially opening the new Grafton-Marquette scout trail. This trail extends for 10 miles through the scenic countryside of the area and it affords a variety of terrain as well as plant and animal life. Troop 113 scouts were the second to start the trail, but were the first to finish, accomplishing the 10 miles in two and one-half hours with the help of the experienced guide furnished by the scout district.

The boys completing the hike are working up many more cases against other developers.

A kilometer is 3,280.8 feet, or about 62 per cent of the distance of the mile, which is 5,280 feet.

A tourist-class passenger in trans-Atlantic flight may carry 44 pounds of luggage without extra charge.

How Should Cuts Be Cleaned?

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Recently a Vietnam veteran told me that the best emergency fluid to use in cleansing a wound is freshly passed urine, and that it need not be your own. He said that any tap water would be more likely to contain harmful materials than would the urine. Would you please comment on this.

Dear Reader—I have heard this before and it seems to be a fairly common belief. It is true that freshly passed urine usually has few if any bacteria in it, in other words, it is sterile. Urine is really water containing natural chemicals filtered directly from the blood. Thus, the Vietnam veteran's statement is at least true to the point that normal urine is sterile unless contaminated. Incidentally, most properly treated tap water is relatively free of harmful bacteria too.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Can 50 years of living a tense, unhappy marriage create a nervous stomach and diarrhea?

Dear Reader—Any situation that causes chronic frustration and tension over a long period of time, can cause digestive disturbances. One of the psychological factors that is important in causing ulcers is long-term chronic frustration. The stomach and the bowel are both very sensitive to our emotional reactions. Some people do have nervous diarrhea. In the treatment of ulcers, diarrhea and similar digestive disturbances, the emotional aspects are exceptionally important and the stressful situation should be alleviated.

Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY (AP)—"Mom, don't worry about the sharks, I don't. The moray eels really scare me though."

That's how the letters began. The writer was our son, Bob, whose interest is marine biology. He wanted experience and the chance to follow his interests "where the action is."

Two weeks after his arrival could also do a good job on my "hard-hat diver," feeding and working under 12 to 20 feet of water with some of the nearly 3,000 specimens of marine life on exhibit.

Opened in 1938, Marineland is dedicated to study and research in marine biology. It also offers the public a unique experience in its educational and entertaining exhibits.

Bob wrote: "The first few weeks I was upset about the nurse sharks, which are like hungry puppy dogs crowding to get food. Everyone said they were harmless, but my mind wasn't. He wrote, "I paid a compliment to the announcer. He said that Wayne Birkett, the head diver, stated that 'Bob is the best diver he has had in quite a few years. In less than a month he has learned all of the jobs that the senior divers do. He moves exceptionally well in the water and seems natural.'"

Despite our concern about the unknown—at least for us—that he walks with daily in those tanks, we were happy and proud of his attitude when he wrote recently:

"I don't plan on doing this (diving) the rest of my life, but I know that I'll be able to look back on it someday and know that the reason I did my job so well was because I enjoyed it."

Appearances can be deceptive. After West's low spade opening it looks as if South is sure of two spades, three diamonds and the other two aces, but we watched a pretty good declarer come away with only five tricks after the defense finished operating on him.

It started out normally enough. South won the spade and played ace and another diamond.

At this point West came up with a rather unusual second hand high play. He played his queen of diamonds. He was going to look mighty silly if it turned out that East had been dealt only jack and one diamond but West had figured out that if South held four diamonds to the ace-nine he would have started his diamond play with a low one to dummy's king.

That all became academic when East followed with the nine. Now West led his seven of diamonds and it was up to South to play from dummy.

You can see South's problem. He needed three diamond tricks. If West had started with queen-jack-7-4 the way to get them was to finesse dummy's 10.

This situation wouldn't be any problem to you readers. You can see just what the diamond situation was.

South couldn't see it and eventually South played the 10. East took his jack and returned a spade and when the smoke had cleared away South was down two at his partner's cinch contract.

Sunburn treatment

CHICAGO (UPI) — Ointments, wet compresses and soothing lotions are items helpful in treating a sunburn. A bland cold cream or lightweight mineral oil may be applied, say health educators at the American Medical Association.

They add this word of caution about commercial sunburn medications: "These products contain ingredients which are intended to reduce pain, but which can cause allergic skin reactions in susceptible individuals. If the pain is excessive or if extensive blistering is present, see a doctor."

CHICAGO (AP) — A Chicago investment banker who returned Wednesday from a trip to China said he made a close tie with the Chinese by pledging support and a $5,000 reward in a hunt for the prehistoric Peking man, missing since Pearl Harbor Day 1941.

"Our relationship with the Chinese was spurred tremendously by our interest in the Peking man," Christopher Janus, 61, said in an interview. "The subject seemed to catch fire with them and we pursued it."

"Anybody bringing back the Peking man would be a hero to the Chinese. They consider it one of their most priceless cultural collections," Janus added.

The top of a skull, a tooth and bones of a prehistoric man were found in caves outside Peking in 1927-1929 by Davidson Black, a Canadian anatomist, and at that time were believed the oldest evidence in tracing the origin of man. Later, other scientists found more bones of this tribal man who lived about a million years ago.

Janus said his five-man group waited nine months before obtaining permission for a 16-day visit to China starting May 31. The group represented the Greek Heritage Foundation, which Janus heads, and the Harvard Club of Chicago.

The foundation sponsors cultural symposiums and scholarship exchange programs.

Janus said he was told that the Nationalist government boxed the remains of the Peking man and gave it to an American to take from the country the day the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor.

"One of the mysteries is that nobody knows the name of the American," said Janus. "The Chinese think the Peking man is in the United States, lost in the bureaucratic jungle. I think this is more their hope than fact."

"Among theories are that the American's ship was sunk by the Japanese, or that he buried the Peking man somewhere in China and later was killed," Janus said.

Convict Freed Based On Record As Citizen

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — A convict who escaped from a Michigan prison in 1968 and was recaptured two months ago when he stopped to help an Ohio policeman was freed Wednesday.

The Michigan Department of Corrections placed James LeBoeuf on two-year parole under supervision of Ohio authorities. He says he'll never again see the inside of a jail.

A family man with a 20-month-old daughter, LeBoeuf won help from friends in his request for mercy based on a spotless record in Cincinnati.

LeBoeuf first was sent to jail at age 16. Twice paroled, he was sent to a Michigan Upper Peninsula minimum-security prison for felonious assault. He escaped in April 1968, and came to Cincinnati.

Last April 9, he saw a Cincinnati policeman slumped over the wheel of his patrol car, and stopped to help. The officer was not ill. He was simply writing a report. The policeman ran a routine computer check on LeBoeuf because of a recent burglary in the area.

Quickly identified as a wanted man, LeBoeuf was arrested. The hoped-for word of his parole left LeBoeuf's wife in tears.

LeBoeuf works as a pressman in a printing shop and is active in Cincinnati's Big Brother and Boy Scout programs.

"Now that this thing is over with," he said, "the few activities I've begun are not going to stop. I've committed myself to this community."

"I feel God has played an awfully important role," he said. "It's almost like it was predestined that it would wind up like this."

The two-year parole will be "like a drop in the bucket to the rest of my life," said LeBoeuf. "I'll never go back to prison now, I know."

Kahok's Board Revises Stand

COLLINSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — The board of education of the Collinsville school district has voted to permit teams from Collinsville High School to compete in non-contact sports with Lincoln High School of East St. Louis.

The school board voted in April to suspend all athletic competition between the two schools after violence erupted during a basketball game.

The Illinois High School Association placed Lincoln on a one-year probation and members of the Southwestern Conference voted not to admit the all-black high school into the conference because of the disruption at the game.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sports tycoon Nick Mileti added another team to his budding empire Wednesday with the acquisition of a World Hockey Association franchise for Cleveland.

Mileti also announced that his American Hockey League Barons would share the spotlight with the yet-unmanned WHA team in the Cleveland Area next season.

"We've been waiting 11 years to bring big league hockey to town," said the 41-year-old Mileti. "Now we've adopted a baby. It's either been a miracle or a long pregnancy."

The fledgling World Hockey Association is expected to begin operations next fall in 12 cities. In addition to Cleveland, WHA players will take to the ice in Philadelphia, Chicago, Minnesota, New England, Los Angeles, Winnipeg, Houston, Alberta, Ottawa, Quebec City and New York.

The effervescent Mileti, who also owns the Cleveland Cavaliers of the National Basketball Association, and is president of the Cleveland Indians baseball team, had hoped to land a National Hockey League team in Cleveland.

However, his dreams were dashed June 8 when the NHL's two expansion teams were awarded to Kansas City, Kan., and Washington D.C.

Mileti said his new club will have negotiating rights to over 20 names National Hockey League players, in addition to the players drafted by the now defunct WHA franchise in Calgary.

The World Hockey Association offered Mileti the Calgary franchise, but he balked, explaining Wednesday that the players weren't of caliber he was after.

Church League

Only one game was close as Central Christian, DeMolay and Lynnville Christian notched Church League victories Wednesday night.

Central Christian ripped State Hospital 15-3 on a 22-hit attack sparked by Harlan Mason's four hits. Dave Waltrip slammed a pair of home runs.

DeMolay went an extra inning to nip Brooklyn Methodist 5-4 with Ed Crowcroft's triple driving in the winning tally.

Lynnville Christian blitzed Literberry Baptist 13-5 in the makeup of a rained out game.

SUSAN FONDA SUES

PETER FOR DIVORCE

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Susan Fonda, 30, sued to divorce actor Peter Fonda, 32, Wednesday.

Her suit cited "irreconcilable differences" and said they were married in New York Oct. 8, 1961, and have two children, Bridget Jane, 8, and Justin, 6.

Mrs. Fonda is the daughter of Noah Dietrich, former business associate of Industrialist Howard Hughes.

By H. JOSEF HERBERT

Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) —

The Illinois House is quietly setting the stage for a legislative salary increase after the Nov. 7 general elections and before the new General Assembly convenes in January.

Key House members, who have spearheaded the move, deny that they are aiming specifically at a salary boost, but some legislators admit that two bills moving through the General Assembly would make such a move much easier.

One bill—approved by the House 124-7, but temporarily stalled in the Senate—would establish a special commission to make "periodic" recommendations on salary increases. If the measure passes, the commission is expected to issue a recommendation in the fall.

The other bill—a routine measure to appropriate $8.1

million to pay state officers including the governor, judges and legislators—has come under scrutiny because it was

House Appropriations Committee.

Rep. David Regner, R-Mount

Prospect, committee chairman, said the cut was to make the bill a six-month appropriation and admitted that the move could open the way for a salary boost when the General Assembly reconvenes in the fall for a brief session.

As approved by the committee, the bill would provide only enough money to pay the state officers for one-half of the fiscal year beginning next month.

Rep. Tom Hanahan, D-

McHenry, sponsor of the amendment which slashed the money bill, said it was done because the legislators wanted to fund salaries only for the first half of the fiscal year—from July of this year through Dec.

Salaries for the second half of the fiscal year would be funded in the fall, Hanahan explained, when the recommendations from the proposed special committee would be available to the Legislature.

The bill establishing the commission has run into rough sledding in the Senate, however, and critics there say it is only a ploy to make easier the passage of a pay boost in No-

"This whole phony issue of a commission has come about to give them (legislators) an opportunity to come up with a pay increase after the elections in November," one senator told a reporter Tuesday.

If the drastically reduced appropriation bill passes the General Assembly, it would be necessary for the legislators to appropriate additional money in November when the pressures of the electorate are less significant.

Members of both chambers voting on that issue in November would either be recent victors in the Nov. 7 election or lame-duck legislators relatively free from constituents' pressures.

Rep. James Washburn, R-

Morris, sponsor of the appropriations bill, admits that as amended it will require the legislators to take another look at the salary issue in the fall.

Pope Paul Says God Chose Him To Suffer

VATICAN CITY (AP) —

Pope Paul VI said in an emotion-charged speech Wednesday

he feels God has chosen him to suffer in a Church troubled by protest and change.

Speaking on the ninth anniversary of his election to the papacy, he said he never wanted to be Pope and shoulder the "enormous burden of duties, difficulties and needs" as ruler of the world's 600 million Roman Catholics.

The 74-year-old Pope looked in good health as he spoke for about half an hour to a cheering crowd of 8,000 in the Vatican's modernist audience hall.

He said that while cardinals and bishops knelt before him on his election day June 21, 1963—

he became sharply aware that the papacy could isolate him from "those dear to us, from our friends, and above all from the people for whose spiritual good we had been vested with the sublime and exceptional dignity of vicar of Christ."

He quoted from what he called "some personal notes of ours"—his first revelation that he keeps a personal diary. He said this is what he wrote down about his papacy:

"Maybe the Lord has called me to this service not because I have any capacity or that I may govern the Church and save it from its present difficulties but because I may suffer something for the Church and it may be clear that He guides and saves it—no one

LITTLE LEAGUE

The Yanks and Giants took different routes in posting Elks Little League victories Wednesday night.

The Yanks jumped to a 10-0 lead and coasted to an 11-7 margin over the Indians, boosting their record to 9-4. Don Nunes had a double and home run to lead the way for the victors.

The Giants rolled to a 5-0 count over the Cubs on Bruce Baldwin's two-hit shutout that included 13 strikeouts. Baldwin also blasted a pair of doubles for the winners, now 8-5.

By LAWRENCE L. KNOTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 110-year-old land-grant college system was accused by a series of Senate witnesses Monday of placing farm technology ahead of farmers and consumers in a virtual sellout to big business.

The colleges and their schools of agriculture were founded in 1862 through a grant of federal lands and still receive much of their support from federal cash and loan assistance.

Witnesses before the Senate's migratory labor subcommittee, chaired by Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., blamed the colleges and their philosophy for much of what they said has gone wrong in American agriculture.

And two witnesses said the land-grant system is structurally biased against blacks and other minorities who need the help the colleges could give.

James Hightower and Susan Demarco, authors of a recent report by the Agribusiness Accountability Project on the land-grant college system, repeated their allegation that "the tax-supported, land-grant complex has come to serve an elite of private, corporate interests in agriculture, while ignoring those who have the most urgent needs and the most legitimate claims for assistance."

They said agribusiness corporations are welcomed by the college administrators, academics, scientists and researchers in an interlocking relationship in which "money is the web."

Robert Rodale, editor of "Organic Gardening and Farming," a magazine published in Emmaus, Pa., took a similar approach, contending:

"In my opinion, the land-grant colleges have helped to foul up this country by applying too many simplistic technological remedies to farm problems without trying to foresee the eventual consequences of those remedies."

Cartrivision Newest Thing In Home Entertainment

By JUDY VAN SLYKE

Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Bogie and Brando have been plucked from the dusty film cans of the late movies and plugged into the newest thing in home entertainment — see-it-at-your-leisure — cartridge television.

Sears, Roebuck and Co. already is demonstrating and accepting orders for its model and other retail firms including Montgomery Ward and Admiral Corp. plan to market the adapted television systems within the year.

The equipment for the systems was developed and is being manufactured for the various retailers by Cartridge Television Inc., which has been attracting three-deep crowds at its display at the Consumer Electronics Show running through Wednesday at Chicago's McCormick Place.

The company, which calls its system Cartrivision, even has a subsidiary to rent the films—features like "Bridge on the River Kwai" and "Dr. Strangelove," push a button and the videotape marches across the screen in a surprisingly sharp, clear picture.

Blank cartridges are available for those who want to tape network programs off the air, and there's even a camera adaptation to make and play back instantly those home movies.

Frank Stanton, president of Cartridge Television, Inc., says the cartridge system adds about $600 to the cost of a big-screen console television.

But the company thinks its product is worth the extra cost. "The image presented on the screen is far superior to broadcast television received in the home today," said Donald F. Johnston, vice president of marketing.

love—to owners of cartridge television units.

The Cartridge Rental Network expects to open the first of 51 exclusive area distributorships later this month in Chicago.

But viewers will have to rent the films at $7 or $8 a showing—each rented film can be shown only once because it must be rewound on special equipment not for sale to the public.

accused the system of breeding the taste and much of the nutrition out of a wide array of fruits and vegetables in the interest of mechanization, uniform picking times, and higher yields.

She held aloft a "super-market" tomato and said the reason it is "hard, grainy and tasteless," is that agricultural researchers at land-grant colleges bred it "thick walled and firm enough to withstand the metal fingers of a mechanical harvester."

Rep. Frank E. Evans, D-Colo., and Peter Schuck of the Center For Responsive Law In Washington, said in separate appearances that the land-grant system has a built-in bias against blacks.

They said that 16 colleges were created in 1898 in states having large black populations and that these institutions never have received the volume of funds and grants given to other, earlier land-grant colleges which remain primarily white.

In fiscal 1971, Evans said, the white land-grant colleges in those 16 states were allocated about $87 million by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, while the black schools got a combined total of $286,000.

LESBIAN MOTHERS BAND TOGETHER IN GAY MOTHERS UNION

SEATTLE (AP) — The Gay Mothers' Union is a loosely knit organization that provides comfort and mutual understanding for lesbians trying to live as they feel they must while raising children as normally as they can.

"Our rights are really restricted as parents," said Ann. "We feel like parents but we can't act it outside."

They fear that society can take their children from them—a consequence that one is fighting now.

Ann and Beth, both in their mid-30s, live together trying to raise a combined family of five children from previous marriages. Beth is under investigation by social agencies as a possibly unfit mother of her children.

"It's a terrible, paranoid way to live," she says.

To ride out the insecurity, they have the Gay Mothers' Union, where they can share common problems and seek solutions with women such as themselves. Since the first of the year 10 to 20 women have met weekly to talk over their concerns.

It happened to Ellen and Carol women in their 20s who lived together with Ellen's young daughter. They were taken from their home at 4 a.m. by police and the girl was turned over to a juvenile officer after a neighbor complained about the women's relationship.

While they must be prudent in public, the lesbian mothers say, their home life with children is one of great freedom and affection.

Folk Art Continues To Develop

By C.G. McDANIEL

Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Regional folk art continues to develop in the Soviet Union alongside a professional art reflecting the peoples of the 15 Soviet republics. Crafts in Ancient Times and entire country, a Soviet cultural but the arts and crafts in each Today," at the Field Museum official says.

There is some cross-influence among the more than 100 people. The 1,500 pieces in the exhibit represent the work of artists.

Three important coat silhouettes for fall offer women shoppers flattering choice. The tony coat by House of Branell (left) is in shades of olive/blue imported Orsi wool plaid and double-buttoned. Another double-buttoned navy coat appears (center) in a chemise silhouette with a notched-mink collar by Nat Kaplan. Fur-trimmed coats will run the gamut including Seeotta with a peek-a-boo simulated lynx border and deep notched collar. By Russel Taylor it is wrappy and held in place with a leather sash.

Yutkin said that, for example, Georgians work in vivid colors compared to the more conservative Baltic peoples' work.

This diversity is apparent in the exhibition, which features glassware, majolica, lace tapestry, brasswork, jewelry, icons, ceramics, lacquerware, tiles, embroidery porcelain, wood carvings and folk sculptures.

The exhibition, commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Soviet Union, is part of the cultural exchange program. A U.S. technological display called "Research and Development U.S.A." is touring six Soviet cities.

Abstract art is seen in the tapestries. Among these is an enormous purple-eyed owl wall hanging. The tapestries also demonstrate experiments with other than traditional materials.

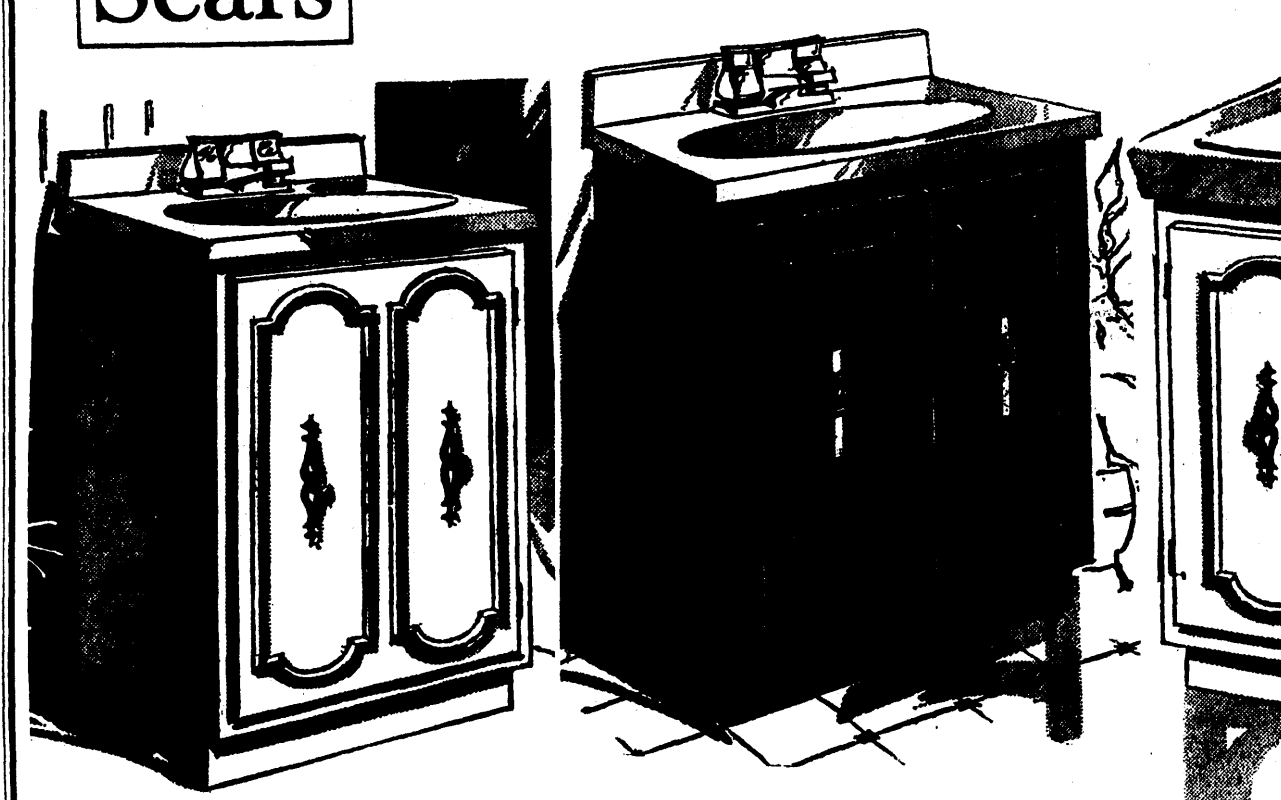

Some of the ceramic animals and other decorative figures and toys display a primitive whimsy.

Among the antique pieces are an elaborate brocade and jeweled saddle for the Czar Ivan the Terrible in the 16th century and a pair of velvet boots covered with pearls for a czarina.

Independence Hall, in Philadelphia, was begun in 1732 and completed in 1753.

Doctor-Reaching Problem

By KATHLEEN NEUMEYER LOS ANGELES (UPI) —It's become an accepted fact of life that most doctors don't—or hardly ever will—make house calls.

And that means, according to one health care expert, that patients who become ill or get sicker during the night or weekend either go to a hospital emergency room or just ignore the problem until morning.

"Frankly, many times it doesn't matter if the problem is put off, because of lot of things get better by themselves," says Dr. Gary London, 35, director of health services of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) from 1967 to 1970.

"Other problems get worse when they are ignored, but going to an emergency room sometimes can be overtreatment. Patients do quite often require attention in their homes."

Back in 1965, when London, like a lot of other young residents, was supplementing his income by moonlighting in emergency rooms, he realized there was a need for more doctors to make house calls.

He reasoned that those same residents who were willing to work in the emergency rooms during undesirable hours could make house calls, and that there might be a cadre of other doctors—semi-retired or just building up a practice—who might want to make extra money by working nights.

The result is a service called "Physicians on Call" (POC), by working two nights a week, discusses the problem with the

The patient is billed directly if a house call is needed, but there is no charge if a telephone consultation is sufficient.

From 6 p.m. to 6 a.m., a paramedic sits on the switchboard in POC's Century City highrise headquarters. He takes down the patient's name, address and symptoms, and then turns the call over to a doctor in a nearby room.

The physician, who can make $10,000 or $15,000 extra a year, by working two nights a week, discusses the problem with the

A house call costs the patient $25, but the price goes up if an injection or special treatment is needed.

Riding in the van are a paramedic-driver, who is sometimes a foreign doctor not yet licensed in California, and another licensed physician.

POC fields about 1,500 calls a month for its physician-subscribers, and makes nine or ten house calls a night. Ninety-five the home of a patient suffering an apparent hypertensive crisis.

The previous evening the service had received two calls from patients suffering from heart attacks and the doctor in the mobile unit had saved one of the life of one of the callers.

"What we are trying to do," London said, "is to provide an intermediary emergency service. We want to keep patients in contact with doctors on a 24-hour basis."

Chuck Flynn New AD At Illinois

URBANA — Chancellor J. W. Peltason Wednesday announced the appointment of Charles E. Flynn as acting director of intercollegiate athletics, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, effective July 1 to serve until a new director is appointed by the Board of Trustees.

"The Board of Directors of the Athletic Association has recommended and I have concurred in the appointment of Mr. Flynn as acting director," Chancellor Peltason said.

"It is hoped that a permanent appointment may be announced at the July 19 meeting of the Board of Trustees. We all are appreciative of Mr. Flynn's willingness to assume this added responsibility."

President Jon E. Corbally, Jr., said that he had approved Flynn's assumption of this additional responsibility with the clear understanding that it would be a temporary appointment of short duration.

"Chuck Flynn's duties as a part of my staff are significant and demanding and he cannot serve in this interim appointment for any protracted period," President Corbally said.

Crampton Odds Upped In Western

NORTHBROOK, Ill. (AP) — Lee Trevino's withdrawal and the absence of Jack Nicklaus heightened the odds in favor of Bruce Crampton making a successful defense of his title in the $150,000 Western Open golf tournament.

The 72-hole event gets underway Thursday on the 6,716-yard par 71 Sunset Ridge Country Club course on Chicago's suburban North Shore with Arnold Palmer and South African Gary Player also among the missing.

Nicklaus is taking time off to rest following his victory Sunday in the United States Open on windblown Pebble Beach which gave him two legs on the unprecedented pro Grand Slam.

He won't play again until the British Open next month, when he continues his quest of the four major titles he hopes to sweep this season.

Trevino, who made a gallant attempt to defend his Open crown despite a recent attack of pneumonia and bronchitis, had planned to play in this old event but withdrew because of exhaustion and the lingering effects of his illness.

That left Crampton, a curly-haired Australian veteran who finished second to Nicklaus in both the Open and the Masters, as the man to beat in this championship which is being played for the 69th time.

"I guess you could say I'm going for the second place grand slam," the 36-year-old Crampton said.

He hasn't won this season but has an incredible record of finishing seventh or higher in 10 tournaments—outside of Nicklaus probably the most outstanding record on the tour this season. He's been in position to win at least a half-dozen times.

"I was playing very well for a long time, about three or four months early in the year. I was really playing about as well as I ever have in my life," Crampton said.

Other standouts in the 147-man field include George Archer and Jerry Heard, each the winner of two titles and more than $100,000 this season; Tom Weiskopf, another $100,000 winner; veterans Billy Casper and Doug Sanders, both of whom recently snapped long slumps; Bobby Nichols, who usually plays well in this event, and England's Tony Jacklin.

The winner gets $30,000 and is the second alternate for the rich World Series of Golf.

CANDY SALE CONTINUES

Over 7,000 boxes of candy in the Elks Little League candy sale have been sold to date, according to reports from club officials.

Some 600 boxes remain and the club is asking Little League players to sell the remaining boxes this Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Players are asked to pick up the candy at the Elks Club early Saturday morning.

A Sandy's meal ticket will be awarded for each 12 boxes sold. Players who still have candy or money outstanding are asked to return the same by 4 p.m. Saturday at the Elks Club.

Proceeds from the candy sale go toward supporting the Little League program.

The New York Turf Writers Association will hold its annual dinner at the Hall of Springs of the Performing Arts complex in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Aug. 13.

ST. LOUIS: Cardinal pitching ace Bob Gibson lets go with a hard overhand pitch in the seventh inning as he becomes the Cardinals' all-time winningest pitcher by defeating the San Diego Padres 14-3 Wednesday evening. Gibson held the Padres to three hits over seven innings for his fifth straight win of the season. Gibson now has a lifetime record of 211-135 to pass up Jesse "Pop" Haines, who held the record with 210 wins. (UPI Telephoto)

Bryant And Giants Cool Cubs Off, 4-0

CHICAGO (AP) — Left-handed Ron Bryant hurled a two-hitter enabling the San Francisco Giants to snap a seven-game Chicago Cub winning streak 4-0, Wednesday.

Bryant, 4-4, yielded a game leadoff single to Don Kessinger and then handcuffed the Cubs although yielding five walks and Billy Williams' two-out single in the eighth.

The Giants nipped Milt Pappas, 5-5, for a run in the second on successive singles by Dave Rader, Alan Gallagher and Tito Fuentes.

A walk to Fuentes, an infield out, Ken Henderson's run-scoring single an error and Dave Kingman's RBI single gave the Giants two more runs in the fifth.

Bryant got in fourth inning trouble by issuing three walks, one intentional. But he struck out Pappas with the bases loaded to end the threat.

Kimpel Claims 2nd Big Upset In State Field

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — Undaunted Janice Kimpel, the 16-year-old cinderella of the 39th Women's State Amateur Golf Tournament, pulled her second major upset in two days Wednesday by eliminating four-time state champion Mrs. Paul Dommers of Belvidere 2 up in the quarterfinal round at Bloomington Country Club.

Miss Kimpel, who eliminated 1971 runnerup Mrs. Robert Sharpenter of Chicago 3 and 1 in first round play Tuesday, joins defending champion Paula Smith of Urbana, eight-time champion Lois Draffe, of LaGrange and little known Melanie Schiller of Palos Park in Thursday's semifinal.

Miss Draffe nearly lost in her bid for a ninth championship. She rolled in her approach shot from 30 feet off the 18th green to the Mrs. Richard Jones of Champaign, then won the extra sudden death hole.

Miss Smith, 25-year-old reading instructor at the University of Illinois, turned back Jackie Schwarz of Itasca 3 and 2. Miss Schiller, 19, who has lived in Illinois less than a year, defeated qualifying medalist Ruth Fender of DeKalb 4 and 3.

The semifinal pairings Thursday pit Miss Schiller vs. Miss Smith and Miss Kimpel vs. Miss Draffe. A 36-hole title match Friday will decide the champion.

Miss Kimpel was seven over par on the 6,141-yard par 73 course as she defeated Mrs. Dommers. The match was even through 16 holes before Miss Kimpel parred the final two holes for the victory.

Miss Draffe rallied from a three-hole deficit after No. 11 to tie the match with the fantastic chip shot on the 18th for a birdie three. Then she made a par 5 on the first sudden death hole to win as Mrs. Jones bogeyed.

In her bid for a second straight championship, Miss Smith never trailed in defeating Miss Schwarz. Miss Smith was six over par when the match ended on the 16th.

Miss Schiller birdied the par 4, eleventh hole for a 4 up lead on Miss Fender, then coasted to the victory. She played even par golf on the back nine after making the nine-hole turn at 3 over par.

The Cards sold contracts of first-baseman Mike Fiore and pitcher Bob Chlupka to San Diego Tuesday.

They acquired infielder Rafael Robles from the Padres and sent him to the Cardinal AAA American Association club in Tulsa.

Gibson Winningest Cardinal Ever, 14-3

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bob Gibson pitched a three-hitter through seven innings and slammed a three-run homer in leading the St. Louis Cardinals to a 14-3 victory Wednesday night over the San Diego Padres for his 21st career baseball triumph.

The win by Gibson, who departed in the eighth inning with a sore leg, eclipsed the old St. Louis club record of 210 career victories.

Gibson struck out seven and walked none in recording his fifth straight win following five straight season-opening losses.

Only rookie Jerry Morales and Leron Lee of the Padres solved Gibson for hits, Lee scoring the San Diego run by doubling over third base leading off the seventh, taking third on Nate Colbert's long fly and racing home on a wild pitch.

With Moe Drabowsky on the mound, the Padres added two runs in the eighth as pinch-hitter Curt Blefary tagged a home run.

The Cards shot in front 10-0 in the first three innings on a three-run homer by Joe Torre and two triples by Lou Brock signaling an early departure by San Diego starter Clay Kirby, 3-7.

Gibson's home run came with teammates Bernie Carbo and Luis Melendez aboard in a four-run Cards seventh.

Allen Keys Rally In 9-3 Triumph

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dick Allen started an eight-run eighth inning rally with a walk and capped it with a bases-loaded single Wednesday night, moving the Chicago White Sox to a 9-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Ken Sanders relieved Milwaukee starter Bill Parsons after Allen walked and Bill Melton singled to open the eighth. After a walk filled the bases, Ed Herrmann singled home the tying runs and a single by Luis Alvarado scored Rick Reichardt with the leading run.

Frank Linzy replaced Sanders and gave up run-scoring singles to pinch hitter Jim Lytle and Pat Kelly. An intentional walk to Carlos May loaded the bases again and Allen followed with a two-run single. May scored the final run when Allen was caught in a run-down between first and second.

The Brewers had taken a 3-1 lead in the seventh on a two-run single by George Scott. Milwaukee's other run came in the first when Scott doubled with two out and scored on John Briggs' single.

The White Sox gained a 1-1 tie with an unearned run in the sixth when Allen reached first on Bob Heise's error, stole second and scored on a double by Melton.

Griffin's Hit Lets Red Sox Win In 11th 10-9

BOSTON (AP) — Doug Griffin's 11th-inning single scored Reggie Smith and gave the Boston Red Sox a 10-9 American League baseball victory over the Texas Rangers Wednesday.

Griffin's single came with none out and the bases loaded off loser Horacio Pina, 0-3. Smith was hit by a pitch. John Kennedy beat out an infield hit and when Pina overthrew first, Smith raced to third. Danny Cater was intentionally walked and Griffin followed with his hit.

Carl Yastrzemski, who had four straight hits, including a double, made it five with another double then scored on a double error to tie the game at 9-9 in the ninth.

With the score tied 7-7 in the eighth Dick Billings doubled to left with two out, scoring Tom Greive, and Dave Nelson scored when catcher Carlton Fisk dropped Rico Petrocelli's relay throw to put Texas on top 9-7.

Petrocelli, who hit a grand slam home run in the fifth, drove in six runs, slammed a solo homer for Boston in the seventh.

Luis Tiant 1-2 who relieved in the 11th inning, was credited with the victory.

Trade Practices

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tim McCarver, twice traded, says baseball's management missed its chance for peace with the players by failing to show respect.

"Being traded is something I'm acclimated to," says McCarver, now a member of the Montreal Expos after a long tenure with St. Louis and a two-year stopover in Philadelphia. "But it would be easier to accept if the people being traded, and their families, were treated with respect."

McCarver's comments came on the heels of the U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding baseball's reserve clause, which binds a player to the team holding his contract and keeps him from negotiating with other teams.

McCarver, here for Montreal's three-game series against the Cincinnati Reds, is an ex-teammate of Curt Flood, whose legal battle against the reserve clause led to the court decision.

Now learning to play left field after 13 seasons as a minor and major league catcher, McCarver says he's adjusted to some of the hardships involved in trades, but not to the way in which they're sometimes conducted.

His latest trade came without warning, with McCarver here for a Phillies-Reds series last week. He got word of the trade from the Phillies, McCarver says, but he never heard from new Philadelphia General Manager Paul Owens.

"At first," McCarver says, "I just thought Owens was new, that he didn't know (he should call me). But after the second day it upset me."

"I played pretty well for them," says McCarver. "I may not do that well on the ball field (he's been in two All-Star games and has a lifetime batting average of about .275) but I want to be treated with respect."

The trade has meant changes for McCarver, professionally and in his personal life. He'd just put down $1,100 on a Philadelphia apartment and was considering moving there permanently from his hometown of Memphis, Tenn.

"Philadelphia is a super town," says the 30-year-old athlete. "I'd like to have settled there."

Noting that the reserve clause will be the subject of collective bargaining between club owners and the Major League Players Association, McCarver says the players will have to live with the Supreme Court decision for the present. "I hope some understanding has been reached between management and the players, he says. "I know the fans get tired of hearing about all these things, but for us it's a fact of life."

Says Criticism Of Campaign Is Unfounded

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Criticism of Champaign as the training site for the U.S. Women's Olympic team is unfounded, says team coach Nell Jackson.

Miss Jackson, who is also a professor at the University of Illinois, Tuesday replied to charges by Olympians Olga Connolly and Martha Watson that Champaign weather would interfere with training.

The training camp is scheduled for Aug. 3-17 but Mrs. Connolly and Miss Watson said they would not participate in the camp if it remains in Champaign.

Miss Watson said in California that Miss Jackson wanted to have the camp at Champaign so she could continue to draw pay as a professor while working with the team.

"I'm not even working this summer," said Miss Jackson. "I think they should have talked to me first before making remarks like that in public."

Miss Jackson said "The decision to hold the camp here was made by the U.S. Women's Olympic Committee. The committee knew the facilities here and knew they were similar to those at Munich."

Miss Watson was quoted as saying the temperature in Champaign in summer is "usually around 90 degrees and the humidity is 80 per cent."

Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Connolly said nearly 40 top women track and field athletes have signed their petition requesting a change in the training site.

Miss Jackson said she didn't think "they know you can train at night here" and added "the last time I can remember Miss Watson being here was at the Olympic Show Meet last June."

It was probably the hottest day of the year and we had a shower midway through. However, the track was fine after the rain. Then, as they were leaving, we had tornado warnings, so that is probably what bothered them."

Miss Jackson said there is little cause for concern since such weather is not typical. She also said it would be difficult to change the location now.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose tripled home two runs in the second inning and then triggered a three-run Cincinnati rally with a leadoff single in the fifth as the Reds bounced back from behind for a 6-4 baseball victory over Montreal Wednesday night.

The victory moved the Reds back into first place in the National League's West Division.

Gary Nolan earned the victory, his ninth of the season, with late-inning help from Tom Hall and Clay Carroll.

Nolan was touched for three runs by the Expos in the first two innings.

Ron Hunt led off the game with a walk, and scored the Expos first run on a sacrifice fly by Ron Fairly. Montreal added two more in the second on a sacrifice fly by Bob Bailey, and a suicide squeeze bunt by Tim Lincecum.

Rose cracked a triple in the second off Steve Renko, 1-5, following back-to-back walks to Dave Concepcion and Nolan.

Tony Perez delivered a two-run single in the fifth scoring Rose, and Joe Morgan, who had reached base with the second of his three hits.

Auto Racing 'Super Team' Is Winless

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — Mario Andretti, Al Unser, and Joe Leonard have five national driving titles among them, including three Indianapolis 500 triumphs in the last four years. Andretti and Unser are $1 million career winners.

Parnelli Jones, an Indy winner himself, put them together in a super team of drivers in January, provided them with radical new super cars and wads of money from Viceroy cigarettes, Samsonite luggage and Firestone tires. He hired some of the best mechanics in racing to support them.

So, how's the super team doing with almost half of the United States Auto Club's championship season gone?

Well, for one thing, not one of the super stars has won a race. Unser, who had won Indy consecutively in 1970-1971, came in a poor second in the $1 million classic this year. Leonard, who won the USAC title in 1971, placed third. Andretti was a far off eighth.

That's the best showing the team has made to date. Currently, however, Leonard is tied with Mark Donohue for first place in the championship points race. Unser is third and Andretti seventh.

They're all entered in the July 2 Schaefer 500, a $400,000 race that is the second jewel in USAC's Triple Crown of championship events that includes the 500.

They are prime candidates for up-front starting positions when the 33-car field is set in qualifying runs Saturday and Sunday. Neither is a prime candidate for the prestigious pole position.

That's because of Bobby Unser and his Screaming Eagle. The older of the two driving brothers from Albuquerque went out on the 2.5 mile Pocono International Raceway Tuesday and clocked 185.299 miles per hour—a dozen miles above the track record.

He has been doing the same thing at all of the USAC championship tracks this season—a fast lap of 196.967 m.p.h. and a four-lap 195.940 at Indy—and mostly at the expense of Jones' super team drivers.

Lucchesi Not Worried About Job

ATLANTA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies manager Frank Lucchesi says he's not worried about his job.

The 45-year-old Lucchesi brushed off reports that new general manager Paul Owens was contemplating a change in managers.

Owens is on the current road trip with the Phillies and said Monday that Lucchesi's status as manager was under review.

Lucchesi, who took over as skipper in 1970, is on a one-year contract.

"Certainly Paul is concerned," Lucchesi said Tuesday after the Phillies were rained out of a game against Atlanta for the second straight day. "What general manager wouldn't be the way we're going?"

Lucchesi added, However, that Owens would have been on this trip even if the Phillies were in first or second place. He attaches no unusual significance to the general manager joining the team on the road.

"Paul arranged this visit several weeks ago," said Lucchesi, whose team has lost 26 of its last 31 games including losing streaks of 11 and nine games and the present skid of six.

"We're not that bad," Lucchesi insisted. "But the manager gets credit when the team wins, so when it goes the other way, I have to take part of the blame."

Lucchesi compares the situation to 1961, when the Phillies under Gene Mauch lost 23 games in a row and management stuck with Mauch, who went on to have the longest managerial tenure in the history of the club.

Lucchesi conceded that the Phillies appear to be in need of revitalization.

"Demoralized? Perhaps in a sense," he said. "Any club that has gone through what we have during the last four weeks is bound to be demoralized. It's only natural for players hitting 50 and 60 points and more under their averages to be in a state of shock. It's been a long ordeal and we're due to snap out of it any minute."

Stock Block Engine Gets Major Test

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — Smokey Yunick, who calls his lair in Daytona Beach, Fla., "the best damn garage in town," unveiled his Oriente Express Tuesday, and may have opened a new era in championship auto racing.

Yunick's hybrid, a basic Eagle from Dan Gurney's shops, mounts a stock block Chevrolet engine equipped with twin turbochargers similar to those used on the Ford and Offenhauser engines of Indianapolis fame.

There is an even bigger difference, however. Yunick says his engine costs about $6,000. The Ford and Offy powerplants retail at about $32,000.

If the Chevrolet proves itself competitive in the July 2 Schaefer 500 at Pocono International Raceway, Yunick may wind up with more orders than he could fill.

Stock block engines have been tried in Indianapolis-type cars several times in recent years, but without the exotic turbochargers that have become standard equipment on Ford and Offy machines.

David Hobbs, a veteran British driver who also is familiar with oval tracks, will handle Yunick's Oriente Express when the 33-car field for the Schaefer 500 qualifies this weekend.

Hobbs took several laps in the car during Tuesday's first full day of practice. But minor problems, mostly with the engine's plumbing, kept him from reaching fast speeds.

New York Snaps Houston Streak Via 5-4 Margin

HOUSTON (AP) — The New York Mets broke a tie with two runs in the eighth inning on Tommy Helms' error and John Milner's single to snap the Houston Astros' six-game National League winning streak 5-4 Wednesday night.

New York's Jerry Koosman, 4-3, and Houston's Tom Griffin, 2-2, traded four-hitters through seven innings and were locked in a 3-3 tie.

With one out in the eighth, Tommie Agee ripped a double off the glove of third baseman Doug Rader and went to third on Ken Boswell's single.

Dave Marshall knocked a perfect double play ball at second baseman Helms, who booted it as Agee scored. Milner then singled home what proved to be the winning run.

The Mets took a 2-0 lead in the fifth on Duffy Dyer's double, Jim Fregosi's triple and a single by Bud Harrelson. Houston got one back in the bottom of the fifth on doubles by Larry Howard and Griffin.

Marshall's homer gave New York a 3-1 lead in the sixth but the Astros tied it in their half on walks to Jim Wynn and Lee May and Bob Watson's two-run double.

Tug McGraw replaced Koosman and surrendered Rader's leadoff home run in the ninth. New York 000 021 020-5 7 1 Houston 000 012 001-4 6 1

Busy Individual

By MILTON RICHMAN

VISALIA, Calif. (UPI)—For Jack Hutchinson, this always is the best part of the day.

In the morning there are dozens of routine chores to be done.

Like making travel arrangements/finding quarters for new players and straightening out concession and ticket receipts from the night before.

Now it is approaching early evening and Jack Hutchinson, the 26-year-old general manager of the Visalia Mets in the Class A California League, already has opened the park for tonight's ball game with the Reno Silver Sox.

Bright, clean-cut and good-looking enough to have made it in the movies had he not chosen baseball instead, Jack Hutchinson is the son of the late Fred Hutchinson, who used to pitch for Detroit before managing the St. Louis Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds.

Young Hutch looks like his father. He also sounds like him when he talks.

Like all good general managers in the minors, he does three things at once and that is what he is doing now an hour before the game with Reno. Along with everything else, he also flicks on the TV set in his office so he can catch "The Game of the Week as he works."

"Some people say baseball is dying, others say it's sick. What do you think?" I ask Jack Hutchinson.

Visalia's young GM thinks a minute. He looks at some papers on his desk, finds the one he wants and says:

"You can't say baseball is sick in this area. We won the California League title last year and this year we're fifth in this first half of the season but our attendance is running better right now than last year. We've drawn 19,734 for 29 home dates so far."

"I don't think baseball is sick at all. I think it has to be aware of the other competitive factors within the sports and entertainment worlds. When my father was growing up, it was strictly baseball and little else. There weren't other siphoning factors like professional basketball, hockey and golf to distract baseball fans. Today things are different, but that doesn't mean baseball is sick."

As Hutchinson talked, one of the umpires entered the office and called out:

"I wanna put somebody on the pass list. Okay, Jack?"

"Okay," Hutchinson replied.

He then went on with what he was talking about before.

"This is a city of about 30,000," he said. "I consider it a beautiful all-American type city. We're 180 miles northeast of Los Angeles and 200 miles from San Francisco and the televised major league games, of course, cut into us, but I see no evidence of baseball being sick from any lack of interest here. The people keep coming out to the ball games. Even those who don't, continually talk baseball."

Farther south, in Los Angeles, Walter O'Malley of the Dodgers agrees with Jack Hutchinson.

"Although I've heard it said baseball is dying, I doubt that," he says. "I look at the attendance figures and note the National League is up again. So many commentators overlook the fact baseball started out the number one sport, then football came along and now deserves a lot of credit for what it accomplished. Other sports also have made good strides. There's basketball and hockey and even soccer made a run at it for awhile. I notice horse racing has extended its season. All these sports are competing for spectator interest now."

"In our early days, we figured all we had to do was put a team on the field, open the gates and the public would come out," O'Malley goes on.

"Well, in Brooklyn we saw things starting to slip a bit, problems developing with the neighborhood and parking, so we promoted. We had such things as 'Long Island Night' involving various Long Island communities like Amityville, Garden City, Hempstead and so on. I think baseball will be all right. Those clubs that promote efficiently and intelligently are doing well at the game."

Two of the most active promotional departments in the majors are operated by the Mets and Dodgers. Significant, perhaps, they are the ball clubs doing best at the gate.

From a player's point of view, Rusty Staub of the Mets feels baseball could be healthier if both the owners and the players would start "honoring each other's integrity."

"Problems should be solved amicably," he says. "I don't think differences between these two groups are any aid to the game. And in the context of helping baseball, I hope some players realize the greatest thing they can do for the game is to have more personal contact with the public, and not be aloof to kids and admirers."

Nobody does any better job at public relations than Staub, but sometimes even that can't help. Fans come up with any number of reasons for staying home.

Ann Pledger, a San Francisco housewife, is an example. She describes herself as "a rabid baseball fan," a Giants' fan, but says she doesn't go out to see them much anymore because they changed third basemen.

"I used to have a front row box right on the third base line," she says. "That was when Jimmy Davenport played third for the Giants. I enjoyed watching the games then, but then they got another third baseman, Jim Ray Hart. I got tired watching all the balls go by him. He never moved. They couldn't even give him an error because of that. I mean it. They kept sending him to Phoenix and bringing him back. That's when I stopped going out to the games. I think Horace Stoneham must like Jim Ray Hart. He keeps bringing him back all the time."

Fosse, Nettles Support Perry In 4-2 Decision

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Gaylord Perry, backed by home runs off the bats of Ray Fosse and Graig Nettles, hurled the Cleveland Indians to a 4-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins Wednesday night.

Perry, 11-6, held the Twins to eight hits, giving them only a second-inning run, when he uncorked a wild pitch to score Eric Soderholm from third base, and another in the ninth on Steve Braun's single and Cesar Tovar's double.

Business Mirror

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Gold is in the news again. Amid rumors that vast international decisions are imminent, the price of the yellow metal is spurring.

One of the rumors concerns an alleged highest-level secret agreement with Russia under which the United States would raise the price of monetary gold from $38 to as much as $140 an ounce, to be accompanied by a Treasury Department shakeup.

There appears to be no tangible substance to the rumors—nothing that anyone has said or done, no official statements. But gold does odd things to man, and man does odd things with gold.

What gives man this gold complex?

It is beautiful. It is rare. It is pure. It is inert and never deteriorates. It is found all over the world but in such tiny quantities that maybe only 100,000 tons have ever been mined.

It is so malleable that an ounce can be pounded in a 100-foot-square sheet, and because of this and other attributes it is acceptable and desirable.

It is desired in increasing amounts by the electronics and other industries, and so as a commodity whose market responds to supply and demand its price has risen to as high as $68 an ounce.

And because it is acceptable everywhere it has been the foundation of international trade where it is used as the backing for currency.

But gold itself is just too heavy to move about. Instead, governments have devised a system of paper money and assigned to it values in terms of gold. The United States is curator of that value, which is fixed at $38 for monetary purposes.

Until last year a foreign nation could redeem its dollars in gold, but then the United States ended convertibility, and since then nobody seems to be sure just what role gold will play in the future.

It is this interim of indecision that gives rise to the rumors, because everyone knows that a new international agreement must be reached if trade is to thrive. But will gold play a role?

The United States has argued for demonetization of gold, but there appears to be dissent within its ranks. Nations such as Russia and South Africa, which are big producers, naturally want the ties retained.

If gold is to remain as backing for currencies, then there is widespread feeling that the price would have to be higher than $38 an ounce. But if it were raised, wouldn't Communist Russia be showered by a windfall?

That was one obstacle to raising the price, but doubts about whether it still exists are fueling the rumors.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices plodded higher Wednesday, making a feeble but successful attempt to extend Tuesday's rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed up 3.39 at 951.61, after being up some 6 points earlier in the session. On Tuesday the blue-chip indicator gained over 6 points.

The rest of the market lagged, however, indicating that the gains were selective and limited in scope.

Except for the government report that May's cost of living scored its sharpest over-all rise in three months, there was little in the news background to affect the market.

Big Board volume totaled 15.52 million shares, compared with 14.98 million Tuesday.

The New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,300 common stocks rose 0.09 to 60.22.

Of the 1,765 issues traded, 672 advanced, and 736 declined on the Big Board. There were 49 new highs and 80 new lows.

Airlines, motors and aircrafts were lower. Steels, mail order, retail and electronics were up, while most other stock categories were mixed.

The Associated Press 60-stock average closed up 0.9 at 327.8, with industrials up 3.3, rails off 0.1, and utilities off 0.5.

There were 103 blocks of 10,000 shares or over traded on the Big Board, versus a revised total of 108 blocks Tuesday.

Gulf Oil was most active on the Big Board, gaining 1/4 to 24 1/2. Trading was paced by 149,900 share block at 24 1/2, up 1/4.

On the American Stock Exchange, the price-change index fell 0.02 to 27.48. Of the 1,188 issues traded, 383 advanced, and 505 declined. Volume totaled 3.78 million shares, versus 4.03 million Tuesday.

In over-the-counter trading, the NASDAQ composite index rose 0.31 to 131.38, and the industrial index gained 0.50 to 141.25.

Rise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The cost of living of Americans rose 0.3 per cent in May despite a drop in food prices for the first time in seven months, the Labor Department said Wednesday.

The increase was caused mainly by higher prices for clothing, used cars, gasoline, household services and nonfood commodities, the department said in its regular monthly report.

On Tuesday, Herbert Stein, chairman of President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, warned that retail meat prices — and other food costs — which shot up nearly 7.5 per cent in the first four months of the year, would be rising again.

Led by nearly a 1 per cent decline in the price of meat, poultry and fish, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) said, prices of food on grocers' shelves went down 0.2 per cent.

But BLS officials pointed out that these food prices were checked during the first week in May, and did not reflect sharp wholesale food price increases since then. The higher retail prices may not show up in the price index until the June report is released next month.

Stein served notice that not only beef and pork but other food prices would show an increase.

Even as the department made its report, the Price Commission was meeting to consider whether to clamp tighter government controls on food prices.

The 0.3 per cent increase in consumer prices in May pushed the consumer price index to 124.7, 3.2 per cent higher than a year ago. Goods and services that cost $10 in 1967 cost $12.47 last month.

The BLS said the price index rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.5 per cent during the six months of the Phase II controls, or less than the 4 per cent rate of increase during the six months leading up to the wage-price freeze imposed in August.

The higher cost of living in May outstripped the purchasing power of average weekly earnings of rank-and-file workers. The BLS said the actual purchasing power of the weekly earnings of the average worker with three dependents dropped 0.6 per cent from April because of the higher prices.

The over-all decline of 0.1 per cent in the cost of food in supermarkets and restaurants was the first drop since October, although food prices held steady in both January and April. There were sharp increases, however, of 1.1 per cent last December and 1.6 per cent in February.

Fruits and vegetables, with a 1.5 per cent increase, were the only food category not showing lower prices in supermarkets in May. Declines were recorded of 0.9 per cent for meats, poultry and fish, 0.3 per cent for cereals and bakery products, and 0.1 per cent for dairy products. The cost of food in restaurants went up 0.3 per cent.

Mars Landing Project May Help Man Fathom Role In Universe

By AL ROSSITER Jr.
UPI Staff Writer

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — The space agency says its Viking Mars landing project of 1975-76 will help man understand his role in the universe and could help him protect his environment on earth.

It is of crucial importance to study other planets, the agency said, to learn more about the changing earth and consequences of the interactions between evolving life and the evolving planet.

"Viking, then, is the beginning of a long process of study and understanding—a key step in determining where man fits, how he can best make use of his home planet, and perhaps a glimpse into his future in the solar system and beyond."

The rationale for the $850 million unmanned project was listed in a 27-page document prepared by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to describe the ambitious expedition.

Plans call for the launch of two 7,500-pound spacecraft on separate rockets between mid-August and mid-September 1975. They will reach the Red Planet the following June and prepare for the critical landing maneuvers.

If Conditions are Right
"If conditions are right, we would be able to land on the 200th anniversary of our nation's independence," NASA said.

Each spacecraft will have two sections—an orbiter and a lander. The orbiter will serve as a communications relay station during landing operations and as a reconnaissance satellite before and after the landing.

The three-legged lander will carry an automated biological laboratory to search for life on Mars, and instruments to study the Martian atmosphere, its soil and its seismic characteristics.

The search for life is of paramount importance. The question of whether there are living things elsewhere has been debated for centuries. Many scientists believe there must be life somewhere in the universe and findings of the Mariner 9 satellite now orbiting Mars have left open the change that some simple life form may exist there.

One More Tool
"If life is found on Mars, no matter how primitive or simple, man will have one more tool for understanding the origin of life and will be that much closer to understanding his own place and role in the universe," NASA said.

"At this time man can only speculate about such profound questions as his uniqueness in the universe. He can only guess about the beginning of life and the relationship of the origin and evolution of life to the origin and evolution of a planet."

The agency also said that if Mars turns out to be lifeless, that also could be important. "The study of a planet which has evolved in the absence of life would provide us with a yardstick with which to determine, for example, how the atmosphere of the earth has been influenced by the advent of biological processes.

"Comparative planetology will be of great value in understanding the troubled earth, and in formulating measures to protect our own environment," NASA said.

The nine airports are: Coles County Memorial Airport, Decatur; Monmouth Municipal Airport, Monmouth; Pittsfield Municipal Airport, Pittsfield; Quad City Airport, Rock Island-Moline; Robinson Municipal Airport, Robinson; Greater Rockford Airport, Rockford; Williamson County Airport, Marion-Herrin.

Work planned for the Coles County airport includes construction, lighting and marking of a northwest-southeast runway; construction, lighting and marking of a connecting taxiway; construction and lighting of a parking apron; installation of a visual approach slope indicator (VASI); installation of a tower and beacon and a lighted wind tree.

Plans at the Pittsfield airport include construction, lighting and marking of the northwest-southeast runway and turn-around pads; installation of VASI, wind indicator and 36-inch beacon; construction and lighting of the parking apron; construction and marking of an entrance road and the removal of a security fence and a building.

Proposed work at Rock Island-Moline is the resurfacing of the northeast-southwest runway and associated taxiways.

Work at the Robinson airport will include the overlaying and marking of the existing east-west runway and the existing connecting taxiway and parking apron.

The Rockford project includes reconstruction of the aircraft ramp, including taxiway edge lighting; replacement of the ramp lighting, and completion of the asphalt shoulders on runway 18-36.

Work at Marion-Herrin airport will consist of construction of a new air carrier apron; construction of a connecting taxiway and partial east-west and north-south parallel taxiways, and reconstruction of a partial east-west taxiway.

Those planning to start a business that requires a stamp should register and pay the tax before commencing business, Mr. Philpott said.

After paying the tax, the taxpayer will be issued a Form 4732 "Special Tax Stamp." This will be his receipt stating that he has paid the tax.

June Conference

The Democratic State Committee will choose 30 delegates to complete a 278-vote delegation, biggest at the Democratic Convention, with the selections to be in proportion to the primary verdict.

After that, only 42 Democratic delegates remain to be selected.

The New York competition, in which McGovern was the only major candidate and his opposition came largely from uncommitted entries turned out this way:

McGovern 225 delegates.
Uncommitted 17 delegates.
Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York four delegates.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine one delegate. A Muskie supporter was ahead in the only undecided contest.

McGovern forces said at least five of the uncommitted delegates will in fact vote for their man on the first convention ballot.

McGovern himself said in Washington that by midnight Saturday, he expects to have 1,407 first-ballot nominating votes. It will take 1,509 to nominate when the Democratic National Convention begins balloting in Miami Beach in three weeks.

McGovern 1,302.3
Humphrey 384.3
Gov. George C. Wallace 371
Muskie 225.05
Uncommitted 521.4

The McGovern forces hoped to pry loose the delegates for first-ballot nomination by seeking delegates now uncommitted, or aligned with other entries.

Kennedy, who had left open the possibility he might accept second place on a McGovern ticket if he was convinced that essential to Democratic victory, closed it with a statement in Washington.

He said it was issued in response to a New York Times story on the call of Matthew Troy, a Queens Democratic leader, for a "legitimate, full blown" vice-presidential draft of the Massachusetts senator.

The Kennedy statement: "Because of a story which appeared in the New York Times this morning, and in order to prevent any further speculation on the part of the press or any doubt in the minds of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention, or the public, I wish to repeat and state as finally as I can that there are no circumstances under which I would accept a nomination for any national office this year."

McGovern told a New York news conference he wouldn't make any judgments about a vice-presidential candidate until the convention.

Humphrey, in Washington, said McGovern probably would fall short of first-ballot victory. The 1968 nominee rated his own chances of winning the nomination at one in four, McGovern's at three out of four.

In a major New York primary upset, Rep. Emanuel Celler, dean of the House at 84, was defeated for renomination by Miss Elizabeth Holtzman, a lawyer and Brooklyn Democratic leader.

Celler said Wednesday he would demand a recount of the returns that showed him the loser by 562 votes. He said he hadn't decided whether to run in November as the Liberal party candidate should he lose the recount.

Manhattan's Rep. Bella Abzug lost her House seat to Rep. William F. Ryan in a primary contest of Democratic incumbents thrown into competition by reapportionment.

The leader of the Democratic majority budget task force, Sen. Thomas Hynes, D-Chicago, rejected the amendment and Knuepfer's companion proposal to put about $541,000 of the amount back in the budget for student services.

Other budgets moving to the Senate floor without change included those for Southern Illinois University the Board of Regents, the Board of Governors, and the public junior colleges.

The committee cut the proposed $1.5 million budget of the Board of Higher Education down to $794,000. In the cuts, only one grant for inter-institutional cooperation was retained. This $50,000 item will continue support of the graduate program at Quad Cities.

In an expected move, the Democratic majority amended Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's proposal for $787 million for aid to common schools, raising it to the $911 million level. This amount was suggested by Michael Bakalis, state superintendent of public instruction.

Republicans made no objection to the amendment, and the bill moved unanimously to the Senate floor. Even if passed by the Senate in the amended form, the bill would have to go back to the Republican-controlled House for concurrence in the amendment.

Royal Mint Issues Millennium Proof

Now that all official presentations have been made to various chiefs of state and noted political leaders, The Royal Mint of Great Britain is accepting orders from American and Canadian collectors for sets of Millennium Proof Coinage. One specimen each of eight denominations has been issued by the United Kingdom over the past 1,200 years.

Great Britain converted to the decimal system in 1971, consequently, each piece in the millennium proof set is dated 1970.

Strangely enough, the Royal Mint has never made proof-quality coins or sets available for public consumption. When the old system was being phased out to make room for the new coinage, it was decided to strike a reasonable number of proof sets for distribution to political notables.

Following U.S. practice of filling proof orders directly through mint facilities, The Royal Mint established a North American Bureau in Washington.

The eight-piece set consists of the famous Penny (or copper as it is more commonly referred to) first struck in the eighth century. The half-penny, pronounced (Hay-pen'y); the three-pence, pronounced (thr'u' pence) with 12 sides; the six-pence introduced by Edward VI in 1551; both the Scottish and English shilling, each with a different coat-of-arms; the florin (two-shillings); and the handsome half crown introduced by Henry the VIII.

This coinage of the United Kingdom comes sealed in a welded-plastic display case. Each piece has been struck on a selected polished blank in the original composition by the master dies. All finished coins have been micro-examined for flaws or possible die imperfections.

Whether or not this particular gesture commits the Royal Mint to a continuing program of proof sets remains to be seen. In the past British authorities have successfully avoided any special issues that may tend to interfere with normal production.

Proof coinage today is one of the rare commodities in which a term investment almost guarantees a sizable return on limited investment.

Readers interested in ordering Millennium Proof Sets of Great Britain, may do so my addressing their orders (accompanied by U.S. Money Order for no more than three sets per order plus 75 cents each for postage) to North American Bureau, The Royal Mint of Great Britain, P.O. Box 700 Benjamin Franklin Station, Washington, D.C. 20044. All orders will be processed on a first come, first served basis with delivery in no more

Used To The Ways Of A Revolution

By TOM TIEDE

DACCA, Bangladesh (NEA)—Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman stepped out on his balcony the other day to acknowledge the shouts of several hundred schoolgirls who had come to pay their respects.

"Bangabundhu!"

"Isn't he handsome."

"Joi Bangla!"

The sheikh was enormously pleased. He smiled. Waved. And pointed to individual twitterers.

Then he ordered every car in the street commandeered to take the girls back to their classes in style.

The incident, a nice piece of cake for the children, is a small peek at a reason for Mujib's enormous popularity in this new nation. It is also a glimpse at a reason for multiplying internal problems. Not every motorist pressed into service that day appreciated the sheikh's generosity. "But, but..." sputtered one angry cab driver, like many people in Bangladesh, is having a hard time getting used to the ways of the revolution. Mujib's government is founded on four "pillars": nationalism, democracy, secularism and socialism. Translated, this means sharing the wealth. "We are all brothers now," says Mujib. "But some of the brothers, those with a few rupees in their pockets, are clearly sour at the new fraternity."

"Before the war, when we were East Pakistanis," says a postal clerk, "I was earning twice the salary I make today. When the new nation was created, everybody's pay was cut by half. I am for the new nation. I am for Sheikh Mujib. But why should my salary be cut?"

The why is quite easily explained. Bangladesh is broke. Much of the nation's industry, devastated by the nine-month war with Pakistan, is still not operating. Farming has been so hard hit that present grain reserves, less than a month's supply for the population, are at an all time low. Export trade

Late summer and early fall are the high hurricane season for North America. The tropical storms originating in the Atlantic and Caribbean present the greatest threat to the Gulf of Mexico and South Atlantic coasts, but can rip in-land and as far north as Canada before blowing themselves out. The U.S. Weather Bureau has used feminine names for the storms, for more rapid and easily remembered identification, since 1953.

Yet though the nation's high-gaols are patriots, if nothing else, at least for the present, and nobody wants to be classified, in Sheikh Mujib's ominous term, as an "enemy of socialism." Mujib is not a hard-hander, but everybody gets the point when he talks of "overall change in the mentality in which the workers worked under the capitalist system." Still, once a capitalist, always a capitalist. And profiteering goes on. The black market thrives in the hotel industry. The hotel help who won't make beds damn well want tips anyway. The blind beggars still can tell if the donation is a rupee or a ringer. And virtually everybody in government service will relax the national ideals for an envelope full of payola. As for the commandeered, disgruntled cab driver mentioned above? The girls he drove to school shared their lunches with him. That saved him two rupees at noon. And he wrangled one more rupee tip. tube, apply a thin coat of grease to the screw or bolt, then insert the screw or bolt and allow to harden. Just before starting to paint, put a little glue in the center of an ordinary paper plate and set the plate container on it. The plate will keep the container from overturning, will catch any paint that runs down the side and makes a good place to rest the brush if you are using one. If you are using a roller, use a separate plate for the roller. Don't throw away that collapsible gate you once used to keep your small son or daughter from falling down the stairs. Instead, paint it and use it outside as a trellis for roses. If a screw refuses to turn counterclockwise when you are trying to remove it, heat a soldering iron and hold it in the slot for a time. When the screw cools, it will come out easily. After a wallpapering job, tack a couple of feet of leftover paper on the inside of a closet or storeroom. Then, if a time comes when a patch is needed, cut it from the leftover piece. Because it has aged the same as the regular paper, there won't be as great a difference as if you had cut the patch from rolled-up paper. If a grouping of objects is to be hung on a wall, lay them all out on the floor in the same relationship as they would be on the wall to judge the effectiveness of the arrangement. When it is necessary to sand the end of a dowel to a point, place the other end in the chuck of a portable electric drill and tighten it. The dowel then can be shaped by holding it against sandpaper while the drill is operating. The sandpaper must be backed by a wooden or metal block. (This will work only if the dowel is one-quarter inch or less in diameter, assuming you have a quarter-inch drill.) If you hang a clothesline in the basement for use in drying clothes in rainy weather, the clothesline can be kept from sagging by soaking it in boiling water for a few minutes before putting it up. ## Lemon Chiffon Pie With Real Tang

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor

If you like your lemon chiffon pie to have real tang, the following recipe should suit you. It uses a little more fresh lemon juice than usual.

One tip about grated lemon rind, used also in the pie. After washing and drying the lemon, use a grater with medium-size slots. Place it over wax paper and with light downward movements (instead of rubbing back and forth) remove only the outer yellow peel in tiny flakes.

TANGY LEMON CHIFFON PIE

Graham Cracker Crust, see below

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 1/4 cups sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup plus 1 tablespoon freshly squeezed lemon juice
4 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon freshly grated lemon rind

Prepare and bake Graham Cracker Crust; chill.

In a 1-or 1 1/2-quart saucepan thoroughly stir together the gelatin, 1 cup sugar and the salt; gradually stir in water and lemon juice.

In a small mixing bowl, with a fork, beat egg yolks well; blend into gelatin mixture. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until gelatin is dissolved and mixture is slightly thickened—8 to 10 minutes; do not boil. Stir in grated lemon rind and immediately transfer to a medium or large mixing bowl (preferably metal). Chill over ice cubes and water, stirring often, until mixture mounds just slightly when dropped from a spoon.

In small electric mixer bowl beat egg whites until they hold very soft peaks; gradually add remaining 1/4 cup sugar, beating at high speed until whites barely hold stiff peaks. Fold chilled mixture into whites; spoon into crust. Chill until set.

If desired, top pie with sweetened whipped cream—a great addition.

GRAHAM CRACKER CRUST
1/4 cups finely crushed graham crackers
3 tablespoons sugar
1/4 cup butter, melted

Stir together crumbs and sugar; gradually stir in melted butter; blend well. Press onto bottom and sides of a 9-inch pie plate. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until brown—about 8 minutes. Cool, then chill before filling.

When painting a room, also paint a small piece of wood. Carry the wood with you when you go shopping for drapes, curtains, slipcovers, etc. Thanks.

Mass Screening Lead Poisoning Test Developed

NEW YORK (AP) — A simple and reliable mass screening test for lead poisoning, from a drop of blood by finger puncture, was announced recently by New York University.

"If field tests confirm its value," the university said, "its use should allow every child between 1 and 6 years of age in this country to be tested for exposure to lead and should contribute greatly to the eradication of lead poisoning."

Lead poisoning is a common health hazard in the United States, NYU noted. The problem is the high content of lead in the paint in old, run-down urban houses. Many young children eat the paint.

"The clinical signs of intoxication are very subtle and easily missed," NYU said. "On the other hand, once clinical intoxication occurs, permanent brain damage remains in more than 28 per cent of those patients that survive."

Five per cent of urban children between 1 and 6 show elevated lead levels in their blood when tested by conventional methods.

The conventional methods were termed cumbersome by the university, however. They involve drawing a quantity of blood and subjecting it to a analysis.

Dr. Sergio Piomelli, professor of pediatrics at the NYU School of Medicine, has developed a method to measure rapidly and accurately a substance in red blood cells that signals the presence of elevated lead levels, NYU said.

"The test is rapid and inexpensive," NYU added. "With this technique, it appears possible that blood samples could be collected by finger puncture on a piece of filter paper and mailed to a central laboratory."

The test measures substances called free erythrocyte porphyrins—FEP. In studies of the test done with the New York City Health Department it was found that the FEP concentration increases with increasing lead level.

"Thus the value of the FEP test is not limited to the diagnosis of severe lead intoxication," NYU said, "but can be used as a method for early detection."

On Managerial Form Of City Government

Judge Paul Verticchio Wednesday morning set a city-wide special referendum for Tuesday, October 3, as the date for voters to decide the question of "shall the City of Jacksonville adopt the managerial form of city government."

Present in court were City Attorney Bill Colburn who did not voice objections to the petition filed by Attorney Walter R. Bellatti on behalf of a committee seeking to change the present form of city government to the managerial form.

At the last court hearing, Judge Verticchio said he would have no objection to the special election in the city's 21 precincts provided that a proposed election reform law had not passed the General Assembly.

Bellatti said he and Mrs. George Zeigler had checked with state authorities concerning the proposed bill and that even if passed by the Legislature at the present session, it would not become effective until January 1, 1973.

Mrs. Zeigler said she had also checked with State Rep. Thomas C. Rose and that it was his opinion that the bill would not be considered during the present session.

Attorney Colburn, on behalf of the city, had asked previously that the special election be conducted at the same time as the November general election as a tax saving for the city. The City of Jacksonville is responsible for all election costs involved in the special referendum. The cost for the special election has been estimated at $2,500 to $5,000.

Specific Change
The form of city government sought by the citizen group would change from the present mayor and 14 aldermen to a part-time mayor and four aldermen elected at-large from the city. The mayor and four aldermen would then hire a trained expert in municipal administration to carry out the functions of all city government.

The city manager would be expected to have professional training either in a college or by experience in some other city, perhaps both, and draw a salary set by the mayor and council. Most estimates place the starting salary at something near $20,000 annually.

No Opposition
Opposition to the proposed change in city government has not yet been voiced by an organized group, although several members of the city council and political leaders, including the present mayor, have expressed opposition to the change.

Those who favor the change in city government are busy providing speakers to service clubs and other organizations willing to listen to the advantages of the proposed new system.

Lee Roy Jackson, Jr., chairman of the citizen group favoring the proposed change was not present in court Wednesday.

Set Jury Trials For Defendants

Three defendants accused of battery entered separate pleas of innocent before Judge Gordon Seator Wednesday afternoon and asked for jury trials.

William Elliott, 29, 135 Walnut Ct.; Thomas Elliott, 24, of 221 South East and James Miller, 18, of rural Murrayville entered pleas of innocent and had jury trials set for July 24.

The three are charged with battery June 8 in central park against Rose Thomas, Jr.

All three are free under $1,000 bond pending appearance at the trial.

A second charge of robbery was dismissed on motion of the state's attorney.

Judge Seator ordered that motions, if any, be filed by July 5 and that arguments would be held on the 13th of July.

Miller also had a preliminary hearing on a charge of theft set for July 3.

The other amendment provided that the package Tuesday after the leaders struck their bargain that assured passage of not only the bonds but two school money bills and a transportation money plan highly prized by Chicago Democrats.

One amendment would give university officials veto power over any construction proposals involving the bond money.

The other amendment provided that all equipment purchased with proceeds from the bonds must be "durable" and capable of remaining in service at least until the bonds are paid off.

Despite the bi-partisan agreement that assured passage of the plan, a rearguard of opponents blasted it as one that might send property taxes skyrocketing.

Blair replied, however, that "the likelihood of us having to fall back in an increase in the property tax is remote to the Nth degree."

The Republican speaker blasted the system of state construction followed under the IBA as one that furnished the state with new buildings on a "patchwork basis."

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—House Minority Leader Clyde Choate had this expression Wednesday as he listened to debate on the Capital Development Bonding Program. Choate, D-Anno, engineered an agreement with party members which permitted passage of the measure, providing the first break in a logjam of bills which has delayed adjournment of the Illinois General Assembly. ## House Passes Capital Development Bond SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois House approved and sent to the Senate Wednesday Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's $561 million capital development bond issue plan.

The House then began to pass a package of transportation and education money bills promised to Chicago Democrats in exchange for their support of the Republican bond plan.

Senate prospects appeared excellent for the five-bill capital development package, which would substantially alter the method by which the state finances construction.

The key vote was 125-36, eighteen more than the three-fifths majority needed to pass the measure under the 1970 state constitution.

The package would empower the state to issue 20-year general obligation bonds for building junior colleges, university buildings, hospitals and prisons.

It represents the third major bond program undertaken by the Ogilvie administration. Others are the $750 million anti-pollution bond issue of 1970 and $900 million in transportation bonds approved by the legislature last year.

The plan would add to a state bond debt already totaling $1.6 billion. Included in the figure are $450 million in Illinois Building Authority bonds, $400 million in general obligation bonds, $300 million in university revenue bonds and $450 million in tollway bonds.

House Speaker W. Robert Blair, R-Park Forest, sponsor of the package, called it a "bold program to restructure bond financing."

Rep. John S. Matijevich, D-North Chicago, told the House, however, that it was voting on a "fly now-pay later" plan.

"All these bills will do is encourage wild, reckless spending," he added.

Blair argued that the capital development plan would save the state $45 million to $65 million in interest payments over 20 years because interest rates are lower for general obligation bonds than for revenue bonds, such as those issued by the Illinois Building Authority.

Despite the soaring bond debt, Blair reminded the members, Illinois is one of 15 states enjoying a triple-A credit rating. He added that the 4.6 percent interest rate on the transportation bonds is lower than average for such issues.

Currently, the Illinois Building Authority issues revenue bonds to pay for state construction. It leases the structures it builds to various state agencies and uses the rent money to pay off the bondholders.

General obligation bonds under the capital development plan would be based not on rents but on "the full faith and credit" of the State of Illinois.

Investors frequently prefer this type of bond because revenue bond payments can be deferred if revenues—such as IBA rents—lag.

The bonding plan was a focus of intense negotiations between Blair and House Democratic leaders.

Two amendments were affixed to the package Tuesday after the leaders struck their bargain that assured passage of not only the bonds but two school money bills and a transportation money plan highly prized by Chicago Democrats.

One amendment would give university officials veto power over any construction proposals involving the bond money.

The other amendment provided that all equipment purchased with proceeds from the bonds must be "durable" and capable of remaining in service at least until the bonds are paid off.

Despite the bi-partisan agreement that assured passage of the plan, a rearguard of opponents blasted it as one that might send property taxes skyrocketing.

The Republican speaker blasted the system of state construction followed under the IBA as one that furnished the state with new buildings on a "patchwork basis."

The bond money would be administered by a seven-member Capital Development Board appointed by the governor. No more than four members of the unsalaried board could belong to the same political party. Appointments would be subject to Senate confirmation.

Two money bills for the Chicago schools were both urgently sought by the Democrats. They argued that they would offset what Supt. James F. Redmond describes as a $30 million crisis.

Rep. Samuel Maragos, D-Chicago, sponsor of one of the measures, estimated that it would raise $10 million for the financially ailing school board by September.

It would allow the school board to adopt a supplemental budget for the year if there is an increase in the tax base.

The other measure, which had been the target of numerous Republican attacks, would allow the board to borrow $35 million in bond issue proceeds that had been earmarked for refurbishing school buildings.

The $250 million bond issue was approved last year by the legislature.

Rep. Gerald W. Shea, D-Riverside, assistant minority leader, told the House that the loan "admittedly isn't the soundest fiscal policy."

"But it's the only thing we can do," he said.

Shea said the $35 million would be paid back from real estate tax revenues over the next five years.

Chicago Schools May Get To Borrow Funds

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois House passed legislation Wednesday to let the financially ailing Chicago schools borrow $35 million in earmarked bond money to pay day-to-day expenses. The vote was 98-47.

At the same time the House passed 125-5 a plan to let the city's board of education adopt a supplemental yearly budget in the event of a rise in the tax rate.

The $35 million plan, which now goes to the governor's desk, and the supplemental budget, which goes to the Senate, were part of a package deal agreed on by House leaders of both parties Tuesday.

Under this plan, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie gets his proposed $561 million capital development bond issue and the Democrats get the school money bills plus a measure to make the Chicago Transit Authority eligible for increased state aid.

The capital development plan was approved and sent to the Senate only minutes ahead of the school bills.

The $35 million would come from proceeds of the sale of $250 million in bonds approved by the legislature last year.

The money is earmarked for refurbishing of buildings.

It would offset what Supt. James F. Redmond describes as a $30 million crisis facing the Chicago schools.

Assistant Democratic leader Gerald W. Shea of Riverside acknowledged that the plan, which calls for repayment of the money over five years, "admittedly isn't the best fiscal policy."

"But it's the only thing we can do," he added.

Critics of the plan blasted the school board for alleged inefficiency and voted against the measure.

Rep. Charles Fleck, R-Chicago, said the money "is going to be misused and misspent like all the other money has been by the Board of Education."

"We might as well take the money out of the bank, put it on a direct conduit to the nearest sewer hole and shove it down," Fleck added.

Rep. Robert E. Mann, D-Chicago, refused to vote for the measure, saying he wanted Redmond to appear in person "to tell us if he's going to use the money for the children or use it to feather his bureaucratic nest downtown."

A number of suburban opponents of the measure contrasted the more than 70 percent of local real estate taxes devoted to schools by some outlying residential areas to the approximately 40 percent spent on education by the city.

Meanwhile, the House advanced to passage stage the remaining element in the package deal, a bill sponsored by Sen. Daniel Dougherty, D-Chicago, to let the CTA put up a variety of city transportation facilities as a so-called soft match to attract state aid.

A "soft match" is so called because it allows government agencies to use already existing facilities or payroll entries to attract new "matching funds" in the form of state grants.

Passavant Expansion

Development of an economical hospital expansion plan to meet needs created by the changing ways the community uses local hospital service was discussed by the trustees of the Passavant Hospital Association at its regular meeting June 19.

James Terry, a member of the Peoria architectural firm working with the board, presented recommendations for a proposed addition to the Passavant building.

The volume of service supplied by the hospital continues to increase, although the number of patients admitted remains about the same, Administrator William R. Mitchell reported. The total number of patients using emergency and ambulatory care facilities during the last eight months is 26,320, an increase of 1,512 over the same period last year.

Laboratory service has increased this year by 54,520 procedures. Smaller increases have occurred in x-ray, inhalation therapy, and pharmacy service.

The proposed new structure would total about 37,450 square feet on two levels, one below ground. The ground-level floor would house new quarters for the laboratory, x-ray, ambulatory care, emergency, therapy, and medical records departments.

A third elevator would be added near the present elevator bank, and new drives and parking areas would provide better traffic movement.

Most materials used in the hospital would be received and dispatched in the basement level, which would include a central sterilization room.

The exterior design of brick masonry and concrete would be similar to that of the present structure.

The board will study the recommendations in relation to projected income and overall financial situation.

Approval was given for expenditure of up to $42,000 from budgeted funds for improvements in food service areas at Passavant, on the recommendation of the buildings and grounds committee.

The Trustees also granted honorary medical staff status to Dr. Gerald Quinn. Dr. Quinn, who is leaving Jacksonville, has presented his medical library to the hospital.

Dr. Jose M. Bahamonde, a licensed physician on the State Hospital staff, was granted the privileges of a surgical assistant. Both actions were taken upon recommendation from the medical staff presented by Dr. Charles Johnston, president.

Mrs. Dean Floreth, Aid Society president, announced that several merchants have made contributions to the activity therapy program at Norris, and that new uniforms have been selected for candy strippers. She also presented revisions in Aid by-laws and in the gift shop constitution, which were granted.

Paul Nickel, vice-president of the board, conducted the meeting in the absence of the president, Clarendon Smith. The Rev. William Sturgess offered the opening prayer.

Trustees present included Henry Aldridge, Lew Cummings, Marvin Martin, Mrs. William Young, Russell Hubbert, Robert Bradley, Arthur Lauff, Richard Pugh, Joseph Whalen, Richard Ware, Mrs. Orville Foreman, Herman Brown, William Chipman, Mrs. A. G. Stainforth, Thomas Rose, and Lloyd Anderson.

Lobbyist Weil Irresponsible; Investigators

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois Legislative Investigating Commission said Wednesday that there is "no basis whatsoever" for charges by teachers union lobbyist Oscar Weil that lawmakers were offered money to vote for a no-strike bill aimed at public employees.

In a report on a commission probe of Weil's charge, the group accused the representative of the Illinois Federation of Teachers with "unpardonable irresponsibility."

"It was soon discovered that Weil had no personal knowledge regarding any bribes or attempts to buy legislative votes on specific bills," the report said.

In the IFT newsletter May 12, Weil charged that the rival Illinois Education Association had offered lawmakers "money and other favors" in return for a favorable vote on the bill.

"We must conclude that his actions reflect unpardonable irresponsibility and extremely bad judgement," the report said. "We find no evidence of wrongdoing on the part of the IEA... or any legislator."

Dr. Curtis Platt, executive director of the IEA, issued a statement saying it is "a sad day when an Illinois Federation staff member is proven a liar by the Illinois General Assembly."

The bill, which would have given public employees the right to bargain collectively but barred strikes, was defeated in the House.
